Food stamp outage affects Eastern U.S.

Low-income residents doing their Thanksgiving shopping Friday got an unpleasant surprise when they got to the checkout stand.

Their food stamp debit cards didn't work. Customers at the Henderson Wal-Mart store were asked to wait until the system came back on line, which didn't happen until early afternoon Friday. Wal-Mart placed signs throughout the store advising customers of the problem. Other local stores reported similar outages.

The problem wasn't confined to just Henderson, or even to just Kentucky. It affected the entire eastern half of the country, fully half of the states where JPMorgan Chase provides electronic benefits transfers to the national Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program.

"It's the whole state and the whole eastern part of the United States," said an employee with the Frankfort headquarters of the Kentucky Cabinet for Families and Children, who declined to give a name. "It's a huge problem; we've been getting calls all day."

Kentucky and Indiana were among the 10 affected states, which also included the U.S. Virgin Islands. Other states included Connecticut, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, New York, Pennsylvania, South Carolina and West Virginia.

According to the U.S. Department of Agriculture website about the SNAP benefit, JPMorgan Electronic Financial Services provides electronic benefits transfer services for the food stamp program in 21 states, so the apparent computer outage affected half of them.

The company provided only skimpy details about the problem. Here is the entire statement that JPMorgan Electronic Finan-

Henderson firefighter Chad Garrett lets out rope as Lt. Bill Rhodes heads into the water at the Hays Boat Ramp as the fire department conducts its monthly dive team training Friday morning. The rope doubles as a communication link for the diver.

Rhodes clears his air valve as he begins his training. The fire department has 10 trained divers ready to respond at any time for rescue situations. Each shift trains once a month to keep sharp on maneuvering in the water as well as how to use the equipment strapped to their body while in murky situations. Many divers dive with their eyes closed, using only their hands and communication with spotters on the surface because of low visibility.

HFD firefighter Brad Mattingly, left, gets hosed down by firefighter Eddie Payne after coming out of the Ohio River from dive team training. Lt. Scott Foreman said they hose off the equipment because of the sand and dirt collected from being in the water. Three shifts train once a month to maintain a high level of responsiveness

MIDLAND, Texas — Four veterans were killed and 16 other people were injured when a train slammed into a parade float carrying the returning heroes to a banquet to honor them in West Texas, officials said Friday.

The float took the full force of the train at a railroad crossing Thursday afternoon. Some people managed to jump clear as the train, with its horn blasting, bore down on the float decorated with American flags. Horrified spectators at the parade could only watch as the carnage unfolded.

"The train honked its horn, but the 18-wheeler could not go anywhere because of the other one (truck) being right in front of it," said Daniel Quinonez, who was waiting in his vehicle as the parade went by. "It was a horrible accident to watch happen right in front of me. I just saw the people on the semi-truck's trailer panic, and many started to jump off the trailer. But it was too late for many of them."

Sudip Bose, a front-line physician in Iraq who had been volunteering at the parade, said Friday that the immediate aftermath of the collision reminded him of the war.

"It was a scene of total chaos," Bose said, of Odessa, about 20 miles to the northeast.

He described how veterans were already tending to the wounded with lim-

Hostess closing doors, blaming labor costs

NEW YORK — Twinkies may not last forever after all.

Hostess Brands Inc., maker of the spongy snack with a mysterious cream filling, said Friday it would shutter after years of struggling with management turmoil, rising labor costs and the ever-changing tastes of Americans even as its pantry of sugary cakes seemed suspended in time.

Some of Hostess beloved brands such as Ding Dongs and Ho Ho's likely will be snapped up by buyers and find a second life, but for now the company says its snack cakes should be on shelves for another week or so. The news stoked an outpouring of nostalgia around kitchen tables, water coolers and online as people relived childhood memories of their favorite Hostess goodies.

Customer streamed into the Wonder Hostess Bakery Outlet in a strip mall in Indianapolis on Friday afternoon after they heard about the company's demise. Charles Selke, 42, pulled a pack of Zingers raspberry-flavored dessert cakes out of a plastic bag stuffed with treats as he left the store.

"How do these just disappear from your life?" he asked. "That's just not right, man. I'm loyal. I love

Petraeus: CIA withheld al-Qaida role in attack

By Kimberly Dozier and Nedra Pickler

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Testifying out of sight, ex-CIA Director David Petraeus told Congress Friday that classified intelligence showed the deadly raid on the U.S. Consulate in Libya was a terrorist attack but the administration withheld the suspected role of al-Qaida affiliates to avoid tipping them off.

The recently resigned spy chief explained that references to terrorist groups suspected of carrying out the violence were removed from the public explanation of what caused the attack so as not to alert them that U.S. intelligence was on their trail, according to lawmakers who attended Petraeus' private briefings.

He also said it initially was unclear whether the militants had infiltrated a demonstration to cover their attack.

The retired four-star general addressed the House and Senate intelligence committees in back-to-back, closed-door hearings as questions persist over what the Obama administration knew in the immediate aftermath of the Sept. 11 attacks and why its public description did not match intelligence agencies' assessments.

After the hearings, lawmakers who questioned Petraeus said he testified that the CIA's draft talking points in response to the assault on the diplomatic post in Benghazi that killed four Americans referred to it as a terrorist attack. Petraeus said that reference was removed from the final version, although he wasn't sure which federal agency deleted it.

Adding to the explanation, a senior U.S. official familiar with the drafting of the points said later that a reason the references to al-Qaida were deleted was that the information came from classified sources and the links were, and still are, tenuous. The administration also did not want to prejudice a criminal investigation in its early stages, that official said, speaking on condition of anonymity because the official was not authorized to discuss the process publicly.

Democrats said Petraeus made it clear the change was not done for political reasons during President Barack Obama's re-election campaign.

"The general was adamant there was no politicization of the process, no White House interference or political agenda," said Rep. Adam Schiff, D-Calif. "He completely debunked that idea."

But Republicans remain critical of the administration's handling of the case. Sen. Marco Rubio, R-Fla., said Petraeus' testimony showed that "clearly the security measures were inadequate despite an overwhelming and growing amount of information that showed the area in Benghazi was dangerous, particularly on the night of Sept. 11."

In fact, Petraeus told lawmakers that protesters literally walked in and set fire to the facility, according to a congressional official who attended the briefing. U.S. Ambassador Chris Stevens died from smoke inhalation. Petraeus said security at the CIA annex was much better, but the attackers had armaments to get in.

Petraeus, who had a long and distinguished military career, was giving his first Capitol Hill testimony since resigning last week in disgrace over an extramarital affair with his biographer, Paula Broadwell. Lawmakers said he did not discuss that scandal except to express regret about the circumstances of his departure and say that Benghazi had nothing to do with his decision to resign.

He was brought to a secure room beneath the Capitol, avoiding crowds of photographers and television cameras.

Hamas targets Jerusalem, launching rocket attack

By Ibrahim Barzak and Josef Federman

Associated Press

GAZA CITY, Gaza Strip — Palestinian militants took aim at Jerusalem for the first time Friday, launching a rocket attack on the holy city in a major escalation of hostilities as Israel pressed forward with a relentless campaign of airstrikes in the Gaza Strip.

Israel called up thousands of reservists and massed troops along the border with Gaza, signaling a ground invasion of the densely populated seaside strip could be imminent. The attack on Jerusalem, along with an earlier strike on the metropolis of Tel Aviv, raised the likelihood that Israel would soon move in.

Israel triggered the current fighting by assassinating the military chief of the ruling Hamas militant group on Wednesday, then conducting dozens of airstrikes on weapons-storage sites used by rocket squads. The sudden attack came in response to days of heavy rocket fire from Gaza.

Israeli leaders have threatened to widen the operation if the rocket fire doesn't halt. Foreign Minister Avigdor Lieberman said options included the possible assassination of Hamas' prime minister, Ismail Haniyeh, and other top leaders.

"Every time that Hamas fires there will be a more and more severe response," he told Channel 2 TV. "I really recommend all the Hamas leadership in Gaza not to try us again. ... Nobody is immune there, not Haniyeh and not anybody else."

While Israeli military officials insist they have inflicted heavy damage on Hamas, there has been no halt to the militants' rocket fire. Hundreds of rockets have been fired, including a number of sophisticated weapons never before used.

The rocket attack on Jerusalem was unprecedented, setting off the eerie wail of air raid sirens across the city shortly after the beginning of the Jewish sabbath, a time when roads are empty.

Tax amnesty program winds down

■ Payments accepted through Nov. 30

Gleaner staff

Kentucky's tax amnesty program is heading into its final days, and officials at the state Finance and Administration Cabinet warn delinquent taxpayers to take advantage of the offer while they can.

Nov. 30 is the final day to come to terms with the tax man. The program allows those who are delinquent in paying their taxes to make good on the debt without fees or penalties and by having the normal interest charges cut in half.

Nearly 170,000 people and businesses were behind on their tax payments when the amnesty program started Oct. 1. They were sent letters notifying them of the amnesty program, and warned that they face stiff penalties and renewed collection efforts if they ignore the offer and their bills remain unpaid after Nov. 30.

Since Oct. 1 the cabinet has fielded more than 25,000 calls, and more than 10,000 people and companies have made payments. Meanwhile, state workers have been logging extra hours to keep up with the number of inquiries.

A similar program a decade ago resulted in more than 23,000 taxpayers paying the state about $40 million.

Gov. Steve Beshear initially estimated the state could collect as much as $61 million from the program. More recently cabinet officials have estimated the effort will raise tens of millions of dollars.

Fort Campbell brigade returns to Afghanistan

By Kristin M. Hall

Associated Press

FORT CAMPBELL—The commander of one of Fort Campbell's most heavily deployed brigades said Friday he has seen progress in the capability of Afghan security forces as the brigade starts its sixth deployment.

Col. R.J. Lillibridge, the commander of the 3rd Brigade Combat Team, 101st Airborne Division, briefed reporters by telephone from the brigade's area of operations in southeastern Afghanistan, an area that the brigade knows well after four deployments to Afghanistan since 2001. The brigade was the first Army combat brigade to deploy to Afghanistan following the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks and also deployed twice to Iraq.

The brigade is working in three key provinces — Khost, Paktia and Paktika — located south of Kabul and along the Pakistan border. They are partners with the Afghan National Army's 1st Brigade, 203rd Corps, as well as Afghan National Police and Afghan Border Police.

About 45 days into their 9-month deployment, Lillibridge said the coming transition to significantly reduce the size of the American forces in Afghanistan is going better than he anticipated.

"Even though we have been here operating with the Afghans for a decade now, they know that very shortly their responsibility for their country is going to be solely on their own," he said.

He said about a quarter to a third of the security operations are being conducted by Afghans alone, and the rest are with assistance from the 3rd Brigade Combat Team.

"Something different than what we had back in 2010 is that we don't conduct any unilateral operations," Lillibridge said. "Everything that we do is partnered with the Afghan Army or the police or the border police."

During their last deployment, the brigade was leading most of the security operations, so the U.S. forces were developing their own plans based on intelligence they gathered and then told the Afghan security forces what they were going to do. But now he sees the Afghan soldiers and police taking over the leadership role.

"They know who the bad people are or where they live and operate," Lillibridge said. "The Afghans are driving those operations and we are providing support for them."

He said the Afghan people aren't expressing fears or concerns with him about what could happen to the country after U.S. forces draw down.

"A lot of them are ready to assume the responsibility for their country, for their province and their district," he said.

Generally insurgent attacks slow down in the winter months in remote parts of Afghanistan in the mountainous regions, but Lillibridge said that the snow and cold weather won't prevent enemy activity in Khost Province, which borders Pakistan's tribal regions.

Ky. court overturns murder conviction

By Brett Barrouquere

Associated Press

LOUISVILLE—A man convicted of murder as a teenager won a new trial after the Kentucky Court of Appeals concluded Friday that his attorney was ineffective in handling the case.

The appeals court ordered the Madison Circuit Court to retry 27-year-old Christopher McGorman Jr. in the Jan. 29, 2000, shooting death of a classmate, 14-year-old Larry Raney of Winchester.

McGorman was 14 at the time of the shooting but was tried as an adult. He's serving life in prison at the Kentucky State Penitentiary in Eddyville.

Writing for the court, Judge Denise Clayton found that the defense attorney allowed McGorman to be interviewed by police without independently investigating the incident or having his client evaluated. Clayton concluded those mistakes permeated the entire trial, rendering it unfair. Chief Judge Glenn Acree and Judge Michelle Keller concurred in the opinion.

"In this case, it does not seem 'reasonable' trial strategy to allow a juvenile to be interviewed by the police and confess when defense counsel has not had the juvenile evaluated by a mental health professional nor spoken to a prosecutor about the effect of the statement," Clayton wrote.

McGorman's defense at trial was that he was legally insane and was not responsible for his actions at the time he shot and killed Raney. During the trial, the jurors watched a 45-minute videotaped police interview in which McGorman described how he'd shot Raney in the back of the head, dragged his lifeless body out of a barn and left it in a cornfield.

The shooting took place behind his home in Clark County.

Local blood drives set for December

Residents in Henderson and Union counties will have multiple opportunities to donate blood to the American Red Cross in December.

All blood types are needed to ensure a reliable supply for patients.

A blood donor card or driver's license, or two other forms of identification, are required at check-in. Individuals who are 17 years old (16 with parental permission in some states), weigh at least 110 pounds and are generally in good health may be eligible.

High school students and donors 18 years old and younger also have to meet certain height and weight requirements.

For more information, call (800) RED-CROSS.

Here are the locations where residents can donate blood:

Henderson County

■ Dec. 6, 2 to 6 p.m., Bend Gate Elementary, 920 Bend Gate Dr., Henderson.

■ Dec. 10, 1:30 to 6 p.m., Presbyterian Church, 100 S. Main St., Henderson.

■ Dec. 11, 7 a.m. to 7 p.m., Immanuel Baptist Temple, 540 Second St., Henderson.

Union County

■ Dec. 3, 2 to 7 p.m., First Baptist Church, 802 N. Adams St., Sturgis.

■ Dec. 13, 2:30 to 7:30 p.m., St. Ann Catholic Church, 304 Church St., Morganfield.

Teacher indicted for child porn

An English teacher and cross country coach at Hancock County High School was indicted on 39 counts of possession of matter portraying a sexual performance by a minor on Wednesday.

An indictment warrant was issued for Daniel S. Neal, 42, Owensboro, and bond was set at $120,000 cash, Kentucky Attorney General Jack Conway announced on Friday.

The charges against Neal are the result of an undercover investigation by Conway's Cybercrimes

Unit that began on May 2. A search warrant was executed at Neal's home, where 460 suspected child pornographic videos and images were allegedly seized.

The Office of Bruce Kuegel, Commonwealth's Attorney for the 6th Judicial Circuit representing Daviess County, is handling this case.

Officials think man died in debris fire

MOUNT VERNON, Ky.—Kentucky Division of Forestry officials say an eastern Kentucky man has died after being found near his home with burns over most of his body.

WLEX-TV reports officials think 64-year-old Robert Childress suffered the burns while trying to get an out-of-control debris fire near his residence in Rockcastle County contained.

Officials say crews were dispatched on Thursday to a report of a brushfire after smoke was noticed from the air. Upon arriving, they found Childress, who was taken to University of Kentucky Hospital where he was pronounced dead Friday morning.

Official say the death is being classified as an accident.

Indiana picks firm for new bridge

INDIANAPOLIS—A group of partners who propose building a new Ohio River bridge between Indiana and Kentucky for $763 million, nearly 25 percent below previous cost estimates, won a state panel's endorsement Friday for Indiana's portion of a sweeping two-state bridges project.

After a brief presentation, the Indiana Finance Authority granted preliminary approval to a bid submitted by WVB East End Partners, a team that includes Walsh Investors, VINCI Concessions and Bilfinger Berger and 21 other entities.

Dion Longworth was ‘a caring soul’

I was friends with Dion Longworth. We attended North Junior High School together, and we were fellow class officers during our senior year at HCHS. When Dion began attending NJHS, he had the odds stacked against him. He was labeled as the “new kid.” Everyone knows that being the new kid is a hard gig. Dion stood strong, not to be torn down by others. He dove into the activities he loved, including cross country and the academic team, and he easily won over everyone with his quirky laugh and big grin. Dion was his own person, and he was extremely confident in who he was and who he wanted to be. In junior high and high school, it is easy to be influenced by your peers, but he always stayed true to what he believed in, and he didn’t let peer pressure influence his decisions. Dion was extremely dependable. During our senior year, he was the only class officer that never missed a 7 a.m. meeting. I can honestly say, but hate to admit it — a couple times, Dion was the only class officer that showed up for the meeting. He was mature beyond his years and took his responsibility in representing his class peers very seriously. He was the perfect class officer because he was a good listener. Everyone’s opinions were heard, and Dion never judged them. He was always willing to sacrifice to please others. I remember we were the last two seniors to finish decorating for prom night. Dion assisted me and acted as my stress reliever with his silly personality. We were determined to make our prom the perfect night for our classmates and finished decorating just two hours before our special night began. Dion was a caring soul. The last time I saw Dion was in May 2009. He made a special trip to Henderson from Indy to attend a breast cancer charity event for our classmate, Myra McKee. This was just other prime example of how caring, genuine and sincere Dion really was. I am heartbroken, knowing this tragedy cut Dion’s life short. A unique soul like Dion only comes around once in a lifetime, and I am proud to call him a friend!

FOP praises community services program

The Fraternal Order of Police Lodge No. 9 of Henderson is greatly appreciative of the Henderson Detention Center’s Community Services Program. The CSP provides a valuable service to the community, both city and county, and local nonprofit agencies. Without the assistance this program provides, our community would not shine as bright as it does. The members of the Henderson FOP Lodge No. 9 would like to give a Community Partners “salute” to Jailer Ron Herrington and all the members of the CSP.

Try a little ‘Vitamin G’ and get new outlook

In light of FOX America’s red-state overreaction to Obama’s re-election I have been contemplating marketing a new product for right-wing America. It’s “Vitamin G.” Anyone who knows me knows my love of gravy. My day is not complete without a dose of my own special Vitamin G — gravy. Put it on your buttermilk biscuits or morning oatmeal, makes no difference. It’s good for what ails you and my new gravy vitamin will be fortified with political “guts,” little bits of James Carville Cajun Gumbo and a “liberal” sprinkling of magic reality dust thrown in for good measure. Try it you’ll like it. Right-wingers never cease to amaze me with their illogical way of thinking and irrational reactions to reality. For all the sore losers who have requested secession from America I say, “Good riddance.” It’s comical to watch the governors of these right-wing states (Texas, Alabama, etc.) backtrack on their radical statements about Obama. You know the fact is most of “the takers” in our country live in the conservative red states. They are the real food-stamp states. They receive so much more in government benefits than they pay in taxes. The hypocrisy of FOX and right-winger rhetoric is off the charts, but it doesn’t stop them from whining ad nauseam. Have they learned nothing since the election? I doubt it. Most of them are so brainwashed with Rush propaganda they still think climate change, the killing of bin Laden and the election results are hoaxes. They can’t be taken seriously. These are the tea-party types that make up FOX News and right-wing talk-radio’s demographic. If the government could just individually accept the secession of these people, including Orly Taitz and Donald Trump, and deport them to a right-wing country of their choice, then allow hardworking, honorable immigrants to take their place we would quickly find that many of our governments’ problems would be solved. I’m all for that. Who’s with me? Viva la Vitamin G! It will give you a whole new liberating and liberal outlook on the world.

McConnell has chance to help country

By Tom Williams

Our senior senator from Kentucky made a rash statement a couple of years ago, opining that his mission in life was to make President Obama a one-term president. It didn’t work. Now, Sen. McConnell is one of the most important players in the drama of the fiscal cliff, a term coined to underline the severity of the coming changes to tax policy coupled with spending cuts that could torpedo our recovery. This cliff is fiscal, not physical, and is not something that will happen instantly, so its immediate impact on us is somewhat exaggerated. If the spending cuts and tax increases happen, they might push us into a mild recession later in 2013, but will have nowhere near the negative impact of the Great Bush Recession. That said, it’s not something to be taken lightly, and with the state of the world economy and the chaos of Europe’s economies, a relatively small blip in our economy could resonate overseas and compound the damage. This is serious, but likely not fatal. One part of these changes that our economy could probably use is the expiration of the Bush tax cuts for the extremely wealthy. The biggest post-war expansion in our economy occurred from 1983 to 1987, when the top marginal tax rate under Reagan was 50 percent. The expiration of the Bush cuts would only take the top marginal rate from 35 to 39 percent, where it was during the economic boom of the Clinton years. Any rise in rates needs to be tied to reductions on spending, that’s a given, seeing that we have a huge deficit and a looming cloud of debt. The Senate is likely the place where a solution to this problem will take shape, given its deliberative and collegial nature, and the fact that it’s peopled by more seasoned, reasonable people from both parties. Sen. McConnell is a creature of the Senate, and his life’s arc has made him a master of policy, compromise, collegiality and partisanship, in a weird and unique mixture of qualities that place him, at this point in our history, at the nexus of power. How apt for the inheritor of the seat once held by Henry Clay, John Sherman Cooper and Alben Barkley, the only other Kentuckian ever to lead either party in the Senate. I want our senator to succeed in this effort .... But I’m afraid that Mr. McConnell won’t think that he’s able to compromise because it would cost him in the election in 2014, when this very red state might reject someone who would compromise with the hated Democratic president and his party. The Tea Party supporters might be waiting in the tall grass. I’ll go out on a limb here, and speak for some Democrats, at least the ones who think like me. Mr. McConnell, if you truly work for compromise in D.C. and help to move us toward a progressive, fairer tax code where the rich pay a fair share, toward a streamlined, slim-downed government, toward an immigration policy that makes sense, forward, as it were, into a future where we can live together in spite of our differences, a lot of Kentucky Democrats are ready to see you re-elected. You’ve done great things for Kentucky and especially for Henderson in your powerful position as party leader. Now you can do a great thing for your country. The choice is yours.

Recycling: Is there really an option?

By Susan Sauls

Did you know ... You can compost bird feathers, plain cooked pasta and wine corks? You can up-cycle all those old T-shirts in your closet and make lots of different styles of clothing and braided headbands? A well-known brand of orange juice comes in a variety of clear plastic bottles — one is recyclable and the other is NOT. The smaller 1.75 liter bottle is made from No. 1 PETE plastic (recyclable) and the bigger 2.63 liter bottle is made from No. 7 OTHER plastic (NOT recyclable locally). A plastic shopping bag takes more than 1,000 years to break down? Fewer than 5 percent of those plastic shopping bags used in the United States are recycled? It takes 70 percent less energy to make paper from recycled paper than it does to make it from virgin fiber? The Chinese used old fishing nets to make the world’s very first piece of recycled paper way back around

200 B.C.? The recycling symbol was designed in 1970? By the time you read this, Tri-County Recycling Alliance will have collected and sold more than 1,000,000 (that’s ONE MILLION) pounds of recycled plastic since February of this year? Staggering, but true. It’s interesting trivia, for sure, but it’s important information about something for all of us to do. I’ve heard it all .... “But it takes too much time.” “Everything is fine just the way I do it now.” “It’s just landfill space. I can’t make a difference with my little bag of trash each week.” “I don’t have enough space at home.” “As only one person, I won’t make a difference so why should I do it?” Quite interesting comments I really have heard during the last year. Does it really take too much time to put a plastic bottle, an aluminum can, your junk mail or your newspaper in a different container next to your trash? Let’s look ahead for a minute. Are you going to be a savvy Christmas shopper and avoid buying items packaged in layer after layer of paper and plastic? Are you going to wrap your gifts in that pretty paper with the red foil stripes and gold foil bells only to find out the paper isn’t recyclable because it has those shiny foil bells and stripes throughout it? Will you pass up wrapping that new shirt in a box and wrapping paper if you can just wrap it in paper? What do you think about all this? Please let me know. I’d like to share some of your comments with our readers. Send your recycling thoughts to me at ssauls@hendersonky.us. By the way, what did you do with your carved pumpkin after Halloween? (Did you compost it or roast the seeds?) And what do you plan to do with the carcass of your Thanksgiving turkey? (It makes delicious broth for soup.) Just wondering.

The writer is recycling education and outreach specialist for the Tri-County Recycling Alliance.

Oil platform catches fire in Gulf

By Michael Kunzelman
Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS — The Coast Guard was searching Friday for two workers missing after a fire erupted on an oil platform in the Gulf of Mexico, sending an ominous black plume of smoke into the air reminiscent of the 2010 Deepwater Horizon explosion that transformed the oil industry and life along the coast.

The fire, which began while workers were using a torch to cut an oil line, critically injured at least four workers who had burns over much of their bodies.

The images were eerily similar to the massive oil spill that killed 11 workers and took months to bring under control. It came a day after BP agreed to plead guilty to a raft of charges in the 2010 spill and pay a record $4.5 billion in penalties.

There were a few important differences with the Deepwater Horizon explosion: Friday's fire was put out within hours, rather than burning for more than a day and causing the rig to collapse and sink. It's a production platform in shallow water, rather than an exploratory drilling rig looking for new oil on the seafloor almost a mile deep.

An explosion and fire ripped through a Gulf oil platform Friday as workers used a cutting torch, sending at least four people to a hospital with burns and leaving two missing in waters off the Louisiana coast.

"It's not going to be an uncontrolled discharge from everything we're getting right now," Coast Guard Capt. Ed Cubanski said.

Coast Guard Chief Petty Officer Bobby Nash said late Friday that monitoring shows no oil is coming from the well.

Eleven people were taken by helicopter to hospitals or for treatment on shore.

The production platform owned by Houston-based Black Elk Energy is about 25 miles southeast of Grand Isle, on the western side of the Mississippi River delta.

Cubanski said it appeared to be structurally sound. He said only about 28 gallons of oil were in the broken line.

Obama health care law advances in many states

By Ricardo Alonso-Zaldivar
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Threatened with repeal just weeks ago, President Barack Obama's health care law now appears on track in close to half the states, with others playing catch-up and the administration readying a fallback for states not wishing to participate.

Friday was the original deadline for states to notify Washington if they would play a role in building new health insurance markets through which the uninsured can get coverage starting in 2014. Though the administration granted a month's extension, most states have already made their intentions known.

As of Friday, 23 states plus Washington, D.C., were proceeding; 15 said they'd defer to the federal government to run their markets, and 12 were still mulling over their options. The mostly blue group proceeding included five Republican-led states. The undecided included several states that seemed to be moving toward an active role.

"Postelection it's really been 'game on,'" said Kelly Barnes, leader of the health care group at the PricewaterhouseCoopers consulting firm.

Republican presidential candidate Mitt Romney had vowed to begin dismantling the plan his first day in office. But Romney lost, and instead GOP governors are scrambling to see if they can find an accommodation with the administration after two years of fighting the president's signature law.

"The president won the election ... and New Jersey is going to comply with the Affordable Care Act," Republican Gov. Chris Christie said Friday. Christie said he still has questions about costs and is weighing his decision.

Earlier this year he vetoed legislation creating a state exchange, as the new insurance markets are called.

A check by The Associated Press found that 16 states plus Washington, D.C., want to build their own exchanges. Starting Jan. 1, 2014, individuals, families and small businesses will be able to buy private coverage through an exchange in their state, with most consumers getting government assistance to pay premiums.

The exchanges will also help steer low-income, uninsured people into expanded Medicaid programs in many states.

Prime minister dissolves parliament

TOKYO — Japanese Prime Minister Yoshihiko Noda dissolved the lower house of parliament Friday, paving the way for elections in which his ruling party will likely give way to a weak coalition government divided over how to solve the nation's problems.

Elections are set for Dec. 16. If Noda's center-left party loses, the economically sputtering country will get its seventh prime minister in six and a half years.

The Democratic Party of Japan, in power for three years, has grown unpopular largely because of its handling of the Fukushima nuclear crisis and its recent doubling of the sales tax.

Noda's most likely successor is LDP head and former Prime Minister Shinzo Abe. He resigned as Japan's leader in 2007 after a year in office, citing health problems he says are no longer an issue.

CROATIA

U.N. overturns two generals' convictions

ZAGREB — Tens of thousands of jubilant supporters gave two Croatian generals a hero's welcome Friday after a U.N. war crimes tribunal overturned their convictions for murdering and expelling Serb civilians during a 1995 military blitz.

Croatians viewed the decision to release Ante Gotovina and Mladen Markac as vindication they were the victims in the Balkan wars in the 1990s, but neighboring Serbia denounced the ruling as a scandalous injustice toward tens of thousands of its compatriots who were expelled from Croatia after an offensive led by the two.

The deep division over the generals could set back efforts to reconcile the two wartime enemies.

The 3-2 majority decision in the U.N. court's five-judge appeals chamber is one of the most significant reversals in the court's 18-year history. It overturns a verdict that dealt a blow to Croatia's self-image as a victim of atrocities, rather than a perpetrator, during the war.

PAKISTAN

Son of militant leader released

PESHAWAR — The son of a legendary Afghan mujahideen leader was among a group of Taliban prisoners released by Pakistan to help jump-start peace negotiations with the militant group, the man's cousin and a family friend said Friday.

The decision to release the prisoners is seen as a signal to neighboring Afghanistan that Pakistan might be willing to take concrete steps to revive efforts to lure the group to the negotiating table.

Anwarul Haq Mujahid is the son of the late Maulvi Mohammad Yunus Khalis, who fought against the Soviets in Afghanistan in the 1980s. Khalis, who was once invited to the White House by former President Ronald Reagan, died in 2006.

Afghan officials said Thursday that Pakistan freed eight Taliban prisoners and agreed to release many more. Mujahid was not among the eight listed by the Afghan officials, which means at least nine prisoners have been freed.

The most prominent prisoner freed was former Justice Minister Nooruddin Turabi who served when the Taliban ruled Afghanistan.

In troubled Egypt, Copts turn to beloved saint

By Hamza Hendawi
Associated Press

MARGIRGIS MONASTERY, Egypt — There was no mention of churches torched or Christians killed, but the prayer neatly written on a tiny piece of paper and placed atop an icon of St. George in the chapel of a desert monastery left no doubt about the growing fear and despair of Egypt's Coptic Christians.

"Oh Lord, for the sake of all the saints of the church, raise high the banner of the cross and vanquish our enemies, the enemies of the church," it read. "Make our enemies realize their weakness, foil their actions against us, bring joy to our hearts, increase our profit and make us victorious."

There were folded slips of paper all over the icon of the Christian knight rearing on his steed and skewering a dragon with his spear.

Tucked into its frame, piled on a small table below it, spilling on the floor around it, all pleas to God for health, fertility, wealth, happiness — and protection. Copts stood motionless in prayer before the image. Others broke into hymns praising his valor. Wanting to linger in the saint's presence, families picnicked on the chapel floor, gossiping and eating sandwiches.

The past week, hundreds of thousands of Copts from across the country flocked to the monastery of Mar Girgis, as St. George is known in Arabic, in one of the biggest and most exuberant events of the year for Egypt's Christians. The annual pilgrimage at the walled monastery in the deserts of southern Egypt overlooking the Nile is a festival of faith, a time to pay homage to the 3rd Century saint who is one of the most revered figures of

Judge weighs delay in Penn State suit

BELLEFONTE — A key witness against former Penn State assistant football coach Jerry Sandusky will learn in about two weeks whether his defamation and whistle-blower lawsuit can move forward or will face what could be a considerable delay.

Judge Thomas Gavin announced that schedule Friday after a brief hearing on Mike McQueary's lawsuit in the same Centre County Courthouse where McQueary testified this summer that he saw Sandusky sexually abusing a boy inside a university shower more than a decade ago.

Penn State, a defendant in the lawsuit, wants the delay, arguing the matter should not proceed while criminal charges are pending against three former school administrators who are expected to be pivotal witnesses: ex-President Graham Spanier, outgoing Athletic Director Tim Curley and Gary Schultz, a retired vice president.

District Superintendent Gaylen Smyer says students in the class read a set number of books over a certain period.

Medicare premiums going up $5 a month

WASHINGTON — Medicare premiums are going up $5 a month in 2013, the government said Friday. It's less than expected, but still enough to eat up about one-fourth of a typical retiree's cost-of-living raise next year.

Medicare chief Marilyn Tavenner said the new "Part B" premium for outpatient care will be $104.90 a month. In most cases, it's deducted directly from a beneficiary's monthly Social Security check. Currently the premium is $99.90 a month.

Earlier this year, the government projected an increase of as much as $9 for 2013, but health care inflation has remained modest.

Increase to stamp price approved

WASHINGTON — The cost of mailing a first-class letter will go up by a penny in January.

The Postal Regulatory Commission on Friday approved the proposed rate increase, which raises the price of a first-class domestic stamp to 46 cents.

The price of a postcard will increase from 32 cents to 33 cents, while a new global "forever" stamp will allow customers to mail letters anywhere in the world for one set price of $1.10. Currently, the prices for international letters vary.

The prices go into effect Jan. 27.

The U.S. Postal Service, which posted a record annual loss of $15.9 billion, proposed the rate increase last month.

U.N. report: Iran closer to nuclear warhead

By George Jahn
Associated Press

SALZBURG, Austria — Iran is poised to double its output of higher-enriched uranium at its fortified underground facility, the U.N. nuclear agency said Friday — a development that puts Tehran within months of being able to make the core of a nuclear warhead.

The finding also calls into question a tentative new U.S. plan meant to induce Tehran to compromise on its nuclear program by offering a rollback of crippling new anti-Iran sanctions if Tehran cuts back on enriching uranium to 20 percent.

In its report, the International Atomic Energy Agency said Iran was ready within days to ramp up its production of 20 percent enriched uranium at its plant at Fordo using 700 more centrifuges.

That would double Iran's present output and cut in half the time it would take to acquire enough of the substance needed to make a nuclear weapon, reducing it to just over three months.

Iran says it has no interest in making nuclear arms, just nuclear power for its citizens, but the United States and other nations believe otherwise.

In Washington, State Department spokeswoman Victoria Nuland would not comment on the IAEA report but said the IAEA been calling on Iran to intensify efforts toward an agreement on its nuclear program for more than a year.

"That has not happened," she noted.

Stocks go up on optimism over budget talks

By Steve Rothwell
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Optimism that President Barack Obama and Congressional leaders will reach a deal on the budget deficit and avoid the “fiscal cliff” helped stocks notch their first advance in four days.

The market started lower Friday but spiked higher shortly before midday as the top members of the House and Senate spoke at the White House following a closed-door session with Obama. House Speaker John Boehner and Senate Minority Leader Mitch McConnell both said they offered higher tax revenue as part of a deal. Boehner said he outlined a framework that is consistent with Obama’s call for a “balanced” approach of both higher revenue and spending cuts.

“It’s a good start ... the fact that they were all standing together,” said Ben Schwartz, the chief market strategist at Light-speed Financial, a New York-based broker.

The Dow Jones industrial average closed up 45.93 points, or 0.4 percent, at 12,588.31, after falling as much as 71 points at mid-morning. The Standard & Poor’s 500 index rose 6.55 points, or 0.5 percent, to 1,359.88 and the Nasdaq rose 16.19 points, or 0.6 percent to 2,853.13.

Investor concern that Obama and Congress won’t reach a deal on how to cut the deficit has caused a sell-off in stocks since Election Day. Stocks fell Wednesday after Obama insisted that higher taxes on wealthy Americans would have to be part of any deal and that he would not cave to Republicans who have pressed for tax cuts first passed by President George W. Bush to be extended for all income earners.

The Dow is down 5 percent since Nov. 6. If an agreement isn’t made, automatic government spending cuts and tax increases are set to kick in at the beginning of next year. The measures total about $700 billion for 2013 and could send the country back into recession.

Mitch Stapley, chief investment officer at Fifth Third Asset Management, says that investors and traders are likely to be in for a rough ride until the politicians have brokered a deal.

“Volatility is going to be the hallmark as we go through this process ... It’s going to be a very choppy period coming up,” said Stapley, who is based in Grand Rapids, Mich.

The Dow still ended lower for the week, logging a fourth straight weekly decline. That slump has pared the index’s gains for the year to 3 percent. The S&P 500 also ended the week lower, and has fallen three of the last four weeks.

Mixed earnings reports also weighed on stocks.

Dell fell 70 cents, 7.3 percent, to $8.86. The computer maker is struggling as consumers switch to tablets and smartphones away from PCs. Dell said that its revenue may fall as much as 13 percent in the fourth quarter. Sears fell $10.99, or 19 percent, to $47.49 after the retailer said sales at both its Kmart and Sears stores continued to tumble.

Superstorm Sandy depressed U.S. industrial output in October, while production of machinery and equipment declined sharply, reflecting a more cautious outlook among businesses, according to a Federal Reserve report.

The Fed says industrial output fell 0.4 percent last month, after a 0.2 percent gain in September. Excluding the storm’s impact, production at the nation’s factories, mines and utilities would have been up about 0.6 percent.

The yield on the benchmark 10-year Treasury note edged down to 1.58 percent from 1.59 percent late Thursday.

Google invests $75 million in renewable energy

The Associated Press

MOUNTAIN VIEW, Calif. — Google is investing $75 million in an Iowa wind farm as part of its effort to encourage development of cleaner energy sources.

The deal announced

Thursday gives Google Inc. a stake in the Rippey Wind Farm in Greene County, Iowa. RPM Access LLC is the primary owner.

The wind farm is located about 130 miles north-east of Council Bluffs, Iowa, which is home to one of the eight data centers that power Google's Internet search engine and other services.

The Iowa data center won't be getting power from the wind farm.

The high electricity

demand of Google's massive data centers is one of the reasons the company backs energy projects that cause less pollution than traditional power plants.

Google's investments in renewable energy now exceed $990 million.

Fate of pets adds stress, guilt for storm survivors

By Verena Dobnik
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Kate and Warren Sherwood had to think quickly about what to take when Superstorm Sandy's surge flooded their barrier island and caused five houses on their block to burn to the ground. Luckily for their two black cats, Schwartz and Scooter, their pets were a priority.

But the narrow escape wasn't the end of the road for the felines. Their owners took refuge at a hotel that didn't accept cats.

"We sneaked them in and put a 'do not disturb' sign on the door — pretending we're on our honeymoon," said Warren Sherwood, 56, a systems analyst. "But after three days, they got restless and starting meowing."

The couple ended up having to take them to a shelter set up in a gym near their hometown of Long Beach, N.Y.

Entwined with the human costs of the storm, which killed more than 100 people and caused billions of dollars in damage, is another significant toll — that of the cherished pets that died or were left behind as families fled for their lives, adding in many cases to feelings of displacement and trauma.

Some find it hard to understand why animals are a key concern in disasters engulfing human lives, but owners feel an attachment and responsibility to their pets, said Niki Dawson, director of disaster services for the Humane Society of the United States.

"There's such a strong bond between people and animals that people will put their lives at risk not to leave a pet behind," Dawson said. "So they stay, even when they're told to evacuate, and that puts first responders going back for them at risk."

Owners have recounted tales of a dog swimming through flooded streets and extra food left behind for a tarantula no one was willing to take in.

In New York City and on Long Island, the ASPCA has rescued more than 300 animals and treated or provided supplies to about 13,000, working with government and private animal welfare agencies, said spokeswoman Emily Schneider.

In this, file photo, Brian Hajeski carries a dog named Junior as he and a group of men rescue neighbors in Brick, N.J. on Oct. 30, in the aftermath of Sandy. The storm drove New York and New Jersey residents from their homes, destroyed belongings and forced them to find shelter for themselves — and for their pets.

City shelters took in about 400 animals along with their families in the first days after Sandy, Schneider said. There are now more than 100 in shelters with their owners, and a mobile animal medical clinic is cruising the Rockaway areas of Queens and on Staten Island.

In New Jersey, the Humane Society deployed dozens of first responders using mobile units and boats to bring in about 60 displaced animals each day on the barrier islands hit by the storm.

Two weeks after Sandy made landfall, followed a week later by a nor'easter, search-and-rescue teams were led by Animal Care & Control of NYC, a city-contracted nonprofit responding to hotline calls about pets in distress. Callers are owners forced to leave animals behind or unable to care for them, or people who see them wandering in hard-hit areas.

A Manhattan shelter takes in animals round the clock, hoping for owners to show up. And social media teams scour the Internet for reports of lost pets, helping reunite them with owners.

Rescuing animals is mandatory under federal law, which requires local and state governments to include plans for pets in emergency procedures. Federal Emergency Management Agency funds go toward the welfare of animals in disaster zones.

Power outage time after Sandy not extraordinary

By Jonathan Fahey
Associated Press

NEW YORK — As the number of nights without power stretched on for thousands left in the dark after Sandy, patience understandably turned to anger and outrage.

But an Associated Press analysis of outage times from other big hurricanes and tropical storms suggests that, on the whole, the response to Sandy by utility companies, especially in hardest-hit New York and New Jersey, was typical — or even a little faster than elsewhere after other huge storms.

The AP, with the assistance of Ventyx, a software company that helps utilities manage their grids, used U.S. Energy Department data to determine how many days it took to restore 95 percent of the peak number of customers left without power after major hurricanes since 2004, including Ivan, Katrina, Rita, Wilma, Ike and Irene.

After Sandy, New York utilities restored power to at least 95 percent of customers 13 days after the peak number of outages was reported. New Jersey reached that same level in 11 days and West Virginia in 10 days.

Hurricanes Katrina, Rita and Wilma in 2005 and Ike in 2008 all resulted in longer outages for customers in Louisiana, Texas, Mississippi and Florida.

The longest stretch to 95 percent restoration since 2004 was Louisiana after

A utility crew works to restore power on Long Beach Island, N.J., after communities on the island sustained damage from Sandy.

Hurricane Katrina, where local utilities had power restored to only three-quarters of their customers after 23 days before Hurricane Rita hit and caused additional outages.

New York and New Jersey recovered far faster after last year's Hurricane Irene. It took seven days for New York to restore 95 percent of customers and six days for New Jersey. But the number of outages in each state was less than half than from Sandy.

The restoration target of 95 percent allowed the AP to compare responses to the largest number of recent storms using Energy Department data, and is considered by industry experts to provide a meaningful picture of the speed with which utilities restored service to the vast majority of customers.

A week or two without power is, without question, a difficult and frustrating hardship. There's the spoiled food in the fridge and the dark nights. There's the fire danger from relying on candles. No electricity also can mean no heat. In tall apartment buildings, it means no elevator service, a serious problem for the infirm or elderly who can't navigate stairs. For those who rely on mobile phones for communication, it means no way to charge phones — and therefore no way to communicate with loved ones or emergency services.

Michael Redpath of Toms River, N.J. was without power for 15 days before getting it back this week. He and his wife stayed in their home for the first week after Sandy because their friends also had lost power. As some power in the region was restored, and Redpath's wife got sick from too many nights in the cold, they started staying over with friends.

Three networks to air specials Sunday

Less than three weeks after Superstorm Sandy came ashore on the East Coast, three television networks will offer the chance to relive the experience on the same night.

PBS' "Nova" series will air a one-hour special on Sandy on Sunday evening, the same night that History is scheduled to run "Superstorm 2012: Hell and High Water." The National Geographic network first aired its Sandy special on Thursday but will rerun it on Sunday night.

Two of the specials, on PBS and National Geographic, will directly compete with each other Sunday at 7 p.m. Eastern time.

The National Geographic special is being made by Pioneer Productions, which has also made the extreme weather specials "Raging Planet" and "The Year the Earth Went Wild." Producers of "Superstorm 2012" promise to include home video, news footage and computer recreations to tell the storm's story and its effect on people.

History turned to a British production team to make its special, which was initially scheduled for an hour but cut back to 30 minutes. Scientists and meteorologists are interviewed to discuss how the storm formed, along with people who lived through it.

"Nova" also shows storm footage but spends time on the question of whether superstores are becoming more frequent and what can be done to protect coastlines. It airs directly before a Ken Burns special, "The Dust Bowl," about another extreme atmospheric event.

Many of the people affected by the storm will be unlikely to see the TV specials. Thousands of homes remained without power Thursday.

Verizon, AT&T say cell network back up

Verizon and AT&T said Thursday that their wireless networks are fully back up after Superstorm Sandy blew into the New York and New Jersey on Oct. 29.

Verizon Wireless said its network is at pre-storm levels, while AT&T Inc. said "as of today, we're pretty much back to normal."

Sprint Nextel Corp. said it still has some towers out because the companies that connect its cell towers to switching centers haven't completed their restoration efforts.

Federal regulators said Sandy knocked out about 25 percent of cell towers belonging to all carriers in a coastal area spread over parts of 10 states.

Verizon appeared to do better than average. The company said 6 percent of its towers were out of action immediately after the storm. AT&T and T-Mobile USA joined in an "unprecedented" arrangement, letting their customers roam for free on both networks to make up for gaps in coverage due to blacked-out cell towers.

WWII-era love letters wash ashore

World War II-era love letters written by a New Jersey woman to her boyfriend washed ashore during Superstorm Sandy.

A 14-year-old found the 57 letters inside a box while walking along a beach in Atlantic Highlands the day after Sandy struck. They chronicled life for Dorothy Fallon and Lynn Farnham from 1942 until the week before they married in 1948. The Vermont native served in the Pacific during the war.

Kathleen Chaney tells WNBC-TV in New York she started playing amateur detective as her son dried the letters.

She left a message on a website where she learned Farnham had died in 1991. A niece contacted her to say 91-year-old Dorothy Fallon Farnham is in frail health in Asbury Park.

Couple sues cable provider over credits

A Long Island couple is suing Cablevision, saying the cable company should be offering automatic credits to customers in areas that lost service due to Superstorm Sandy rather than waiting for them to call.

Jocelyn and Jeffrey Bard of Huntington are seeking class-action status for the lawsuit filed Tuesday at the New York State Supreme Court. They want damages from the company and an order that it stop billing for services it didn't provide because of the storm.

WHAT DOES THE BIBLE SAY:

By Gary Puryear

"A CARING NATION"

Out of every disaster or emergency there rises a story of heroism and the helping hands of others. Whether it is natural or man-made disasters there is usually quick response to try to help provide at least the necessities of life. There are organizations and individuals who are prepared and willing to provide aid where needed. As a congregation of God's people we are called on to provide help to those in need. We can't help everyone but we along with so many others in our community are helping to care for the less fortunate. The Apostle Paul gave this challenge to Christians. "I have shewed you all things, how that so laboring ye ought to support the weak, and to remember the words of the Lord Jesus, how he said, It is more blessed to give than to receive" (Acts 20:35). While we are challenged to share our blessings with others it is also important to note that those who receive help have a great responsibility. They have the responsibility of telling the truth when they seek help, to utilize their ability to provide as best they can, to use wisely what they are freely given, and to show their appreciation for the services rendered to them. Our Lord taught the value of thankfulness in the healing of the ten lepers. Only one returned to give Jesus thanks (Luke 17:11-19) and he was commended by the Lord. Both the giver and the receiver need to express thanks for what they have. Let's make thanksgiving an attitude of heart every day. After all, we are a blessed people.

these things, and I'm diabetic."

After hearing the news on the radio Friday morning, Samantha Caldwell of Chicago took a detour on her way to work to stop at a CVS store for a package of Twinkies to have with her morning tea and got one for her 4-year-old son as well.

"This way he can say, 'I had one of those,'" Caldwell, 41, said.

It's a sober end to a storied company. Hostess, whose roster of brands dates as far back as 1888, hadn't invested heavily in marketing or innovation in recent years as it struggled with debt and management changes.

As larger competitors inundated supermarket shelves with an array of new snacks and variations on popular brands, Hostess cakes seemed caught in a bygone time. The company took small stabs at keeping up with Americans' movement toward healthier foods, such as the introduction of its 100-calorie packs of cupcakes.

But the efforts did little to change its image as a purveyor of empty calories with a seemingly unlimited shelf life: Twinkies, for instance, have 150 calories and 4.5 grams of fat. Meanwhile, a Ding Dong chocolate cake with filling has 368 calories and 19.4 grams of fat.

Even taking into account changing tastes and competition, Hostess' problems were ultimately rooted in its financials. The company filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection in January — the company's second in less than a decade. Its predecessor company, Interstate Bakeries, filed for bankruptcy protection in 2004 and changed its name to Hostess after emerging in 2009.

Hostess, based in Irving, Texas, had been saddled with high pension, wage and medical costs related to its unionized workforce.

The company had been contributing $100 million a year in pension costs; the new contract offer would've slashed that to $25 million a year, in addition to wage cuts and a 17 percent reduction in health benefits.

Tensions between management and workers were also an ongoing problem.

Hostess filed a motion to liquidate Friday with U.S. Bankruptcy Court after it said striking workers across the country crippled its ability to maintain production. The shuttering means the loss of about 18,500 jobs.

Hostess said employees at its 33 factories were sent home and operations suspended Friday.

Preparing for Christmas at Disney

Breeanna Cox, third from left, and Henderson County High School choir students rehearse their show material Thursday afternoon. Thirty students are signed up to sing at 6:45 and 8:15 p.m. EST on Nov. 29 as part of the Candlelight Processional at Disney World's Epcot Center in the American Gardens Theater in Orlando, Fla. The students' performance will be narrated by actor Neil Patrick Harris. The program is described as a breathtaking retelling of the Christmas story in words and music, and according to County High Director of Choral Activities Felicia Belcher, this will be the first time local high school students will have participated in something like this. The performance will be videotaped and placed on the choir website at <http://www.eschool.henderson.kyschools.us/feliciabelcher/> ited medical supplies when he reached the crash site.

"Instincts kicked in. They were applying tourniquets, holding pressure to the wounds," Bose said.

Early Friday, Midland police spokesman Ryan Stout said 37-year-old Sgt. Maj. Gary Stouffer and 47-year-old Sgt. Maj. Lawrence Boivin were pronounced dead at the scene. Army Sgt. Joshua Michael, 34, and Sgt. Maj. William Lubbers, 43, died later at Midland Memorial Hospital.

Of the 16 others hurt in the crash, four are in stable condition and one is critical. Ten others were treated and released from the hospital in Midland, about 320 miles west of Dallas.

The float was one of two flatbed tractor-trailers carrying veterans and their spouses. Police said the first truck safely crossed the tracks but that the second truck's trailer was still on the crossing as the train approached.

Patricia Howle was waiting in her car at a nearby traffic light as the train approached.

"I just started screaming," she said. "The truck was on the other side of the train, but I did see the panic on the faces of the people and saw some of them jump off."

Deborah Hersman, NTSB chairwoman, said Friday on NBC's "Today" show that the train was equipped with a forward-facing camera whose footage could help in the investigation.

"That will give us some video images if it survived the crash and we can download it, as well as recorders on the train," Hersman said. "We're going to be looking at the signals ... and making sure that the gates and lights were coming down."

Late Thursday, Union Pacific spokesman Tom Lange said a preliminary investigation indicated the crossing gate and lights were working. He did not know if the train crew saw the float. The black box from the train will determine its speed at the time of impact.

The parade had been scheduled to end at a "Hunt for Heroes" banquet honoring the veterans. The wounded service members were then going to be treated to a deer-hunting trip at the weekend. The events were canceled.

The events were organized by Show Of Support, a local veterans group. Its president, Terry Johnson, did not immediately re-

Secretary of Defense Leon Panetta "was deeply saddened by news of the tragic accident involving

"All customers can now use their SNAP (food stamps) and other cash benefits cards after we resolved the technical issue that affected EBT card customers in some states this morning. We apologize for any inconvenience this may have caused. This did not affect debit, credit or other cardholders."

JPMorgan Electronic Financial Services is the nation's largest provider of electronic benefits transfers, which it has been doing since the mid-1990s, according to a website for participating retailers. That site says the company has a 66 percent share of the nation's electronic food stamp business, providing a way to pay for groceries to more than 6.1 million households each month.

The same website also says JPMorgan distributes more than $1.5 billion each month to over 7 million households or individuals.

That includes not only food stamps, but also Social Security payments, Women, Infants and Children (WIC) nutrition benefits, disaster assistance and other programs.

New Mexico coyote hunting contest sparks worldwide outrage

By Russell Contreras
Associated Press

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — The terms of the competition are simple: Hunters in New Mexico have two days this weekend to shoot and kill as many coyotes as they can, and the winners get their choice of a free shotgun or a pair of semi-automatic rifles.

But the planned two-day coyote hunting contest has sparked an online petition that has generated tens of thousands of signatures worldwide. The FBI is investigating a death threat to the gun shop owner who is sponsoring the hunt. And one protester has even vowed to dress like a coyote to trick hunters into accidentally killing a human.

But none of these episodes will likely stop the owner of Gunhawk

Firearms from holding the scheduled two-day coyote hunting race this weekend, despite the international attention the idea has garnered.

"I'm not going to back down," said Mark Chavez, 50, who has faced two weeks of angry phone calls and protests — and even a threat to his life. "This is my right to hunt and we're not breaking any laws."

Under the rules of the contest, the winning team will get its choice of a Browning Maxus 12-gauge shotgun or two AR-15 semi-automatic rifles from the Los Lunas shop, and a hired taxidermist will salvage any pelts and hides from the dead coyotes for clothing.

"I'll even give the furs to the homeless if they need it," Chavez said.

The competition — which opponents are calling a "coyote killing contest" — has sparked thousands of angry emails, social media postings and a petition signed by activists from as far as Europe who have demanded that the hunt be called off. Last week, a small group of protesters held a rally outside of Gunhawk Firearms and waved signs denouncing the event as cruel and "bloodthirsty."

People are upset over the idea of making a contest out of killing an animal that usually lives peacefully alongside residents, said Susan Weiss, 74, who leads the Coexist with Coyotes group in Corrales, N.M.

"There's a tremendous amount of arrogance in conducting this hunt," Weiss said. "(Chavez) is damaging the reputation of ranchers. He is damaging the reputation of legitimate hunters."

UK seniors seeking elusive win

■ Phillips will coach in his final home game tonight vs. Samford

By Gary Graves
Associated Press

LEXINGTON — Overlooked in the season-long talk about Kentucky's underclassmen are 19 seniors who helped with the development of their young teammates.

The seniors' contributions will be recognized before Saturday night's home finale against Samford (7-3) and they intend to follow up that emotional ceremony with their first victory in over two months.

A lot has happened since Kentucky (1-9) routed Kent State 47-14 on Sept. 8. Injuries have forced the Wildcats to use 46 underclassmen including 26 freshmen, and their inexperience has been exploited during an eight-game losing streak.

That skid led to coach Joker Phillips' firing as coach on Nov. 4. He will coach until the end of the season.

While this wasn't what Kentucky's seniors envisioned in their final season, this is a chance to reclaim that winning feeling.

"It would be exciting since it's my last time in Commonwealth Stadium," said senior defensive end Collins Ukwu, who leads Kentucky with four sacks. "I think it'll be fun. I'm just anxious to get back on the field, honestly."

So is Phillips, who will be making his final home appearance with Kentucky. He has said his desire to guide his seniors to the end of their Wildcats' careers factored into his decision to return for the final two games.

Bittersweet as that might be this weekend after being associated with the school for nearly three decades as a player, assistant and head coach, Phillips stresses that Saturday's game is about the players and not him.

"I had my senior day," he said. "That's one of the reasons why I considered not coming back is because I don't want to be a distraction. ... I don't need any treatment, special treatment or anything. I want those guys that have been here and given all they have for this program to be rewarded.

"I appreciate the guys that continued to buy the dreams that we were selling and the seniors did get a couple bowl games."

The Wildcats are coming off a bye week that gave them time to digest Phillips' dismissal. It allowed the seniors to reflect on the opportunities their coach provided and how their careers have developed as a result.

While their impact didn't show in Kentucky's record this season, the rapid development of Kentucky's youngsters might end up defining their legacies. From big things on the field such as teaching them the nuances of their positions to smaller matters off of it such as showing them around the massive campus, the underclassmen are grateful for helping their learning curves.

The senior leadership could be even more important in helping the underclassmen transition to a new coaching staff.

"That's the thing that's going to hurt a lot, not being able to play with the guys I've been around my whole career," junior defensive tackle Tristian Johnson said. "The people I've looked up to my entire career will be gone entering my senior year and now it's going to be guys looking up to me."

"The things I took from the seniors in this program, I've got to try to use them and help the guys coming up."

Ironically, the youngsters' growth and enthusiasm has rubbed off on the seniors to keep working toward ending the losing streak. Kentucky and Samford will be meeting for the first time.

The Bulldogs have won two in a row and enter the game averaging 376.6 yards per game on offense. Senior quarterback Andy Summerlin has passed for 2,165 yards and 10 touchdowns.

After a grueling stretch against the tough Southeastern Conference, facing a Football Championship Subdivision member could help Kentucky get back on track. But the Wildcats can't take any opponent for granted right now, and their underclassmen have been especially passionate in practice about seeing what a victory celebration is like.

Cats win laughter over Lafayette

■ Wiltjer hits seven threes in 101-49 stomp

By Gary Graves
Associated Press

LEXINGTON — Kyle Wiltjer's first 3-pointer gave him a feeling Friday would be a pretty good night.

His instincts were spot-on.

The sophomore forward sank a career-best seven 3-pointers for a game-high 23 points to lead No. 3 Kentucky to a 101-49 rout of Lafayette.

Wiltjer's shooting set the tone for an amazing offensive night for the Wildcats (2-1), who hit 40 of 62 attempts (65 percent), including 11 of 19 from behind the arc. He finished 7 of 11 on 3-pointers, including 5 of 8 in the second half.

"I tried to go hard in shootaround," Wiltjer said, "and coach (John Calipari) always said if you have a good shootaround you have a good game. I try to have that approach every game and come out confident, and tonight I was just fortunate to have some (shots) fall."

Wiltjer set the tone for a game that involved contributions from Kentucky's heralded freshmen class. Alex Poythress followed up his 20-point effort in Tuesday night's 75-68 loss to No. 9 Duke by hitting nine of 10 shots for a career-high 22 points to go with five rebounds.

That didn't stop Calipari from getting on Poythress' case, but it had the desired effect.

JAMES CRISP/ASSOCIATED PRESS

Kentucky's Kyle Wiltjer (33) shoots over Lafayette's Seth Hinrichs during the first half of their game at Rupp Arena in Lexington on Friday night. Wiltjer scored 23 points in UK's 101-49 win.

"He just expects more out of me," Poythress said. "He's just trying to pull it out. I don't blame him."

Nerlens Noel added 15 points and seven rebounds, Willie Cauley-Stein 14 and Archie Goodwin 13. Graduate transfer Julius Mays had 10 of the Wildcats' season-best 23 assists.

"We passed the ball to each other, shot a pretty high percentage from both the 3 and (the field),"

Calipari said. "We're not a 57-, 58-percent 3-point shooting team but I believe we're a 40 (percent team)."

The Wildcats (2-1) won their fourth home opener under Calipari and 10th in the past 11 seasons.

They also improved to 9-1 against the Patriot League.

Tony Johnson scored 13 points for Lafayette (1-2), which lost leading scorer Dan Trist to a sprained ankle during the morning shootaround.

The win opened a three-game homestand for Kentucky, which was coming off a fairly solid effort against Duke. The Wildcats shot 49 percent in that game, including 4 of 10 from 3-point range, and were nearly even on rebounds (31-30) against a veteran Blue Devils squad.

And the confidence gained from cutting a 14-point deficit to three before losing carried over against Lafayette, which was playing its first ranked opponent since an 86-41 loss to No. 6 Villanova on Nov. 20, 2010.

The Wildcats came out hot, hitting their first five shots and six of seven overall. Wiltjer started it with consecutive 3-pointers, Mays added one of his own and Kentucky was on its way to its best first half this season.

"The sky's the limit," Noel said of his teammates' play. "They can play real hard. It's not going to be long before things are clicking."

The Wildcats ended up hitting their first five 3-point attempts and six of eight to highlight a 20-of-31 shooting (65 percent) effort in the first half. Their previous best was 58 percent in the opener against Maryland.

More pleasing to Calipari was how well his seven-man rotation spread the ball around. Everybody scored, with Poythress muscling inside for 12 points, Noel adding nine and Cauley-Stein and Wiltjer eight each.

Racers rally past St. John's, reach final

By Pete Iacobelli
Associated Press

CHARLESTON — Murray State coach Steve Prohm is learning to shrug his shoulders at some of Stacy Wilson's poor shot choices.

"You got to live with the bad," Prohm said, "to get a lot of the good."

Wilson showed that on Friday night, scoring 23 points to lead Murray State into the Charleston Classic championship finals after a 72-67 win over St. John's.

Wilson started slowly, making one of his first seven 3-point tries — more than a couple that were not high percentage shots. Wilson's good side kicked in when the Racers (3-0) needed it most.

He made two long-range baskets in a 12-0 run as Murray State went from seven points behind to a 64-59 lead. Wilson added his fourth and final 3-pointer after St. John's had closed within 64-62.

Wilson also had his team's final basket, a wide-open, celebratory jam to cap a frantic final minute where the Red Storm (2-1) attempted three 3-pointers trying to tie the game.

Now, the Racers can look ahead to Colorado on Sunday with a chance at a second straight pre-conference tournament title. They won the Great Alaska Shootout a year ago. The Buffaloes beat No. 16 Baylor 60-58 Friday.

"We just go out there to try and compete," said Isaiah Canaan, the Murray State star who had 15 points. "People who see us winning, people who know about Murray State know that we're supposed to win games like that."

It didn't look that way for much of the game. St. John's opened a 13-point lead in the first half and was still ahead 59-52 on Chris Obekpa's basket with 7:27 left. Then came Murray State's go-ahead run.

Ed Daniel put the Racers up with two foul shots and Canaan closed the run with a 3-pointer to lead 64-59.

St. John's (2-1) came within 64-62 on D'Angelo Harrison's three-point play with 3:39 left, but got no closer. Harrison led the Red Storm with 27 points.

The Racers had a chance for a more comfortable ending, but Daniel missed a 1-and-1 opportunity with his team ahead 70-67.

Daniel had 15 points and 11 rebounds for Murray State.

Bears QB Cutler sidelined with concussion

■ Campbell is likely starter for Monday night's game vs. 49ers

By Andrew Seligman
Associated Press

LAKEFOREST, Ill. — The Chicago Bears were bracing for an injury to Jay Cutler long before the season started.

Now, they'll see just how prepared they are.

Cutler will miss Monday's game at San Francisco because of a concussion, leaving the Bears without their starting quarterback. The team announced the decision Friday, meaning Jason Campbell is the likely starter against the 49ers.

Star receiver Brandon Marshall said Cutler is getting better, but he also said there's a bigger picture that goes beyond this week's game.

"Our life, our health, is more important than football," Marshall said. "I think we'll get Jay back sooner than later."

For now, the Bears believe they have enough to get by. They brought in Campbell in the offseason for a situation like this, and he found out before Thursday's practice that he'll be starting.

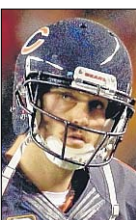

"You definitely don't want to see anyone get hurt or injured in this business," said Campbell, who's made 70 starts in his career with Washington and Oakland. "We understand it is a tough sport. Sometimes, things like that happen."

Coach Lovie Smith would not say if Cutler will make the trip to San Francisco. Players need to be cleared by team physicians and an independent neurological consultant before they can return, under NFL safety protocols. It's possible that the Bears could hold him out even if he gets the OK from doctors.

When asked about that, all Smith would say is: "He's not playing this week, and that's about as much as I'm going to go into it."

He added Cutler is getting better and the Bears hope to have him back for the game against Minnesota on Nov. 25.

Jay Cutler

fery back from a hand injury. He's missed the past four games but went through a full practice on Friday.

Cutler's status was in question after he sat out the second half of Sunday night's loss to Houston. The Bears believe he was injured on a helmet-to-helmet hit by the Texans' Tim Dobbins, who was fined $30,000 by the league, late in the second quarter.

Cutler initially did not show any symptoms and took seven more snaps in the first half. It wasn't until halftime that the symptoms showed up, and the Bears went the rest of the way with Campbell. They also signed veteran Josh McCown this week, giving them a backup behind Campbell.

The 49ers, meanwhile, could be without starting quarterback Alex Smith, who suffered a concussion of his own last week.

The concussion isn't the first for Cutler. He missed a game after being sacked nine times in the first half of a loss at the New York Giants in October 2010. Last year, Cutler broke his right thumb late in a win over San Diego that put Chicago at 7-3. His replacement, Caleb Hanie, struggled and the Bears lost five of their last six.

Vick won't play; Foles will start

PHILADELPHIA — Eagles quarterback Michael Vick will miss Sunday's game vs. the Washington Redskins due to the effects of a concussion.

Rookie Nick Foles, who replaced Vick during the 38-23 loss to Dallas on Sunday, and who practiced with the first team all week, will get his first NFL start in a battle of 3-6 teams fighting to save their seasons.

Philadelphia coach Andy Reid made the announcement Friday at the team's practice facility, confirming a decision that had been in the works since Monday.

It was only because Vick had not completed the league-mandated concussion testing earlier in the week, that Reid did not officially rule him out until the team's final practice.

49ers' Harbaugh back to work

SANTA CLARA, Calif. — Jim Harbaugh practically galloped through the locker room, lively as ever, offering a wave and a smile to long snapper Brian Jennings before putting his arm around right guard Alex Boone.

The San Francisco 49ers coach was back at work Friday and fired up to be there a day after undergoing a minor procedure for an irregular heartbeat that kept him away for all of half a day.

"I'm fine, I'm fine," Harbaugh said. "No limits. Going about everything as normal."

Henry breaks rushing record

YULEE, Fla. — Derrick Henry has broken one of the most coveted and long-standing records in the history of high school football.

Henry broke Ken Hall's career rushing record Friday night. Hall ran for 11,232 yards in four years (1950-53) at Sugar Land (Texas). The record had long been considered an unbreakable mark.

But Henry, a star at Yulee (Fla.) High who has verbally committed to play for Alabama next fall, had been steadily closing in on it all season.

He topped Hall's record on a 52-yard touchdown run against Taylor County in a Class 4A state playoff game.

UCLA's Muhammad is ruled eligible

LOS ANGELES — The NCAA ruled UCLA freshman guard Shabazz Muhammad eligible to play Friday, and the star freshman guard is set to back his Bruins debut Monday night.

The NCAA said Friday that UCLA's sanctions against Muhammad were sufficient after the school required him to sit out three games and repay $1,600 in impermissible benefits. The NCAA and UCLA found that Muhammad accepted travel and lodging during three unofficial visits to Duke and North Carolina.

Muhammad will be in the lineup when the No. 13 Bruins (3-0) return to action Monday night in New York against Georgetown at Brooklyn's Barclays Center.

St. Louis' Majerus will not return

ST. LOUIS — Saint Louis men's basketball coach Rick Majerus will not return to the team because of a serious heart condition.

The 64-year-old Majerus ended the school's 12-year NCAA tournament drought last season with a 26-win team that won its opening game and took top regional seed Michigan State to the wire. The Billikens were ranked for the first time since the 1994-95 season.

Former Evansville coach Jim Crews, added to the coaching staff last season by Majerus, is the school's interim coach.

Cardinals add retro jersey for Saturday home games

Wire reports

For the first time in 80 years, the St. Louis Cardinals will feature the city's name on a home jersey.

The Cardinals are adding a new retro jersey to wear next season at Saturday home games. For eight decades, all home jerseys have had "Cardinals" on the front along with the birds on the bat logo.

The new jersey, an off-white color with red piping along the collar and down the front, will read "St. Louis." The style is similar to jerseys worn in the 1940s and 1950s. The birds on the bat remain, but have enhanced stitching.

The Cardinals will be the 27th team in the major leagues to add an alternate jersey and the fourth to use off-white.

All of the team's jerseys will feature more detail in the embroidery, consistent with the graphic logo used by the club since 1998. The size of the numbers on the front of the jersey will shrink from 4 inches to 3 1/2 inches.

The team will wear red caps on the road, while the blue cap will remain as a road alternate. New batting practice hats also will debut next year.

■ The busy Toronto Blue Jays struck again Friday with their latest big deal: All-Star game MVP Melky Cabrera is set to join them in his return from a drug suspension.

A person familiar with the negotiations said the free agent outfielder and the Blue Jays have reached agreement on a two-year contract worth $16 million. The deal is pending a physical, the person told The Associated Press on condition of anonymity because there was no official announcement.

Earlier this week, the Blue Jays got All-Star shortstop Jose Reyes and pitchers Josh Johnson and Mark Buehrle from the Miami Marlins in a blockbuster trade that could involve a dozen players.

Toronto has not reached the playoffs since winning its second straight World Series in 1993, and has often been stuck behind big spenders in the AL East. After going 73-89 this year, the Blue Jays have made quite a splash in the offseason.

The 28-year-old Cabrera was leading the National League in hitting at .346 for the San Francisco Giants when he drew a 50-game suspension Aug. 15 for a positive testosterone test.

■ The Detroit Tigers have finalized their $26 million, two-year deal with outfielder Torii Hunter.

Hunter hit a career-best .313 last season for the Los Angeles Angels with 16 home runs and 92 RBIs. Acquiring a corner outfielder was a major off-season priority for Detroit, and Hunter won nine consecutive Gold Gloves from 2001-09 before gradually switching from center field to right.

General manager Dave Dombrowski says in a statement that Hunter will be a "tremendous addition to the Tigers' organization both on and off the field."

Detroit is chasing its first World Series title since 1984. The Tigers won the AL pennant last season but were swept by San Francisco in the World Series.

quite honest," Keselowski said. "I was going to be fine with that. At least we were prepared for the worst and that's not what happened, so I guess we're OK."

The pole went to Logano, who is driving his final race for Joe Gibbs Racing. He turned a lap of 176.056 mph in the No. 20 Toyota he's driven for the last four years, beating Marcos Ambrose, who turned a lap of 175.342 in his Richard Petty Motorsports Ford.

Logano turns his car over next week to Matt Kenseth, and Logano moves to Penske Racing, where he'll be a teammate to Keselowski on one of the youngest lineups in the Cup garage. But on Sunday, he'll be trying to close his JGR tenure with a win and won't be trying to help his future teammate.

"Goal number one is to win the race, no matter what," Logano said. "No matter where we go, no matter who else is on the race track, no matter what is going on, it's all about winning. That stuff doesn't matter. Obviously, those guys are racing for a championship and I don't want to be the guy that gets in the middle of that, but I'm out there to win."

■ Trucks Series: James Buescher won NASCAR's Truck Series championship by avoiding trouble in the season finale Friday night.

Cale Gale won the 200-mile race at Homestead-Miami Speedway, edging Kyle Busch at the line as both trucks seemed glued together after hard contact.

The more significant celebration in Victory Lane, though, was saved for Buescher.

Ty Dillon was in position to pull off an upset with three laps remaining — he was running second and just a point behind — but made contact with Kyle Larson.

Buescher was far enough behind Dillon and Larson that he was able to drive around the wreckage that also collected Ryan Blaney.

Miyazato takes lead in Titleholders

Wire reports

Ai Miyazato of Japan kept telling herself to be patient and the putts would start falling. It all came together Friday at the Titleholders, where she shot an 8-under 64 for a one-shot lead.

Two big birdie runs gave Miyazato a good chance to finish off the year with her third win. She finished the front nine with four birdies in a five-hole stretch, then ran off three straight birdies on the back nine at The TwinEagles Club, which had given her fits in the opening round.

Miyazato was at 10-under 134, one shot clear of Na Yeon Choi. Stacy Lewis had a 72, leaving her eight shots behind.

■ Pebble Beach Invitational: Russ Cochran shot a 7-under 65 at Del Monte for a share of the Pebble Beach Invitational lead with fellow Champions Tour player Kirk Triplett.

■ Hong Kong Open: New Zealand's Michael Campbell shot a 6-under 64 to take a one-stroke lead in the Hong Kong Open, while top-ranked defending champion Rory McIlroy missed the cut.

■ Australian Masters: Australia's Matthew Guyatt shot a 3-under 69 to maintain a two-stroke lead after the second round of the Australian Masters.

■ South African Open: Sweden's Henrik Stenson opened a four-shot lead in the South African Open with a 7-under 65 before play was suspended because of an electrical storm.

Booker leads way as Buffaloes top Baylor

Wire reports

Askia Booker scored 19 points and Colorado survived some dreadful foul shooting down the stretch to hold off No. 16 Baylor 60-58 at the Charleston Classic on Friday.

The Buffaloes (3-0) advanced to Sunday's championship game against Murray State. They also earned a measure of payback for last March, when the Bears (3-1) knocked them out in the NCAA tournament's third round.

It wasn't easy for Colorado, though, which went 4 of 18 from the foul line. Andre Roberson missed two free throws with 3.1 seconds left that gave Baylor one final chance.

But Isaiah Austin's catch-and-shoot attempt was off the right rim as the buzzer sounded.

■ Evansville 66, Yale 56: D.J. Balentine scored 16 points off the bench, and Evansville closed the game on a 13-2 run to seal its first victory of the season, 66-56 on Friday at the Coaches vs. Cancer Classic.

Balentine, a freshman, was 6 of 11 from the field. Jordan Jahr added 12 points, and Ryan Sawvell and Lewis Jones had 10 apiece for the Purple Aces (1-2).

■ Eastern Ky. 85, Kennesaw St. 71: Glenn Cosey scored 14 of his 21 points in the second half as Eastern Kentucky pulled away for an 85-71 nonconference victory over Kennesaw State on Friday night.

The junior guard, who played two seasons at Columbus State Community College in Ohio, made two 3-pointers and a layup during an 14-7 run that gave the Colonels (2-0) a 50-41 lead with 12:43 left in the game.

■ N.C. State 94, UMass 76: T.J. Warren had 21 points to lead No. 6 North Carolina State to a 94-76 win over UMass at the Puerto Rico Tipoff on Friday.

Richard Howell added 19 points and nine rebounds and Lorenzo Brown had 11 points and 10 assists.

■ UConn 77, Wake Forest 71: Shabazz Napier and Ryan Boatright each scored 16 points to lead No. 23 Connecticut to a 77-71 victory over Wake Forest in the Paradise Jam on Friday.

■ Alabama 77, Villanova 55: Trevor Releford scored 25 points and Alabama beat Villanova 77-55 on Friday night, running away in the second half to win the 2K Sports Classic benefiting the Wounded Warrior Project.

■ Oregon St. 66, Purdue 58: Devon Collier capped a high-scoring homecoming with a career-best 27 points and 14 rebounds, and Oregon State held off Purdue 66-58 on Friday in the third-place game of the 2K Sports Classic benefiting the Wounded Warrior Project.

■ Oklahoma St. 62, Tennessee 45: Marcus Smart and Le'Bryan Nash scored 17 points each as Oklahoma State beat Tennessee 62-45 on Friday to move into the championship game at the Puerto Rico Tipoff.

■ Auburn 55, Charleston 51: Frankie Sullivan scored 20 of his 24 points in the second half to lead Auburn to a 55-51 victory over College of Charleston at the Charleston Classic on Friday night.

■ Missouri 74, Nicholls St. 54: Alex Oriakhi had 17 points and 10 rebounds, Earnest Ross added 16 points and No. 14 Missouri beat Nicholls State 74-54 on Friday night.

Thunder keep rolling with win over Hornets

Wire reports

Kevin Durant and Kevin Martin each scored 27 points, and the Oklahoma City Thunder rolled to their sixth victory in seven games, 110-95 over the New Orleans Hornets on Friday night.

Serge Ibaka added 15 for Oklahoma City, which shot 54 percent (40 of 74) and built leads as big as 30 points in the first half and 34 in the second, allowing the starters to rest for the entire fourth quarter. Thabo Sefolosha scored 11 points, while Russell Westbrook had 10 points and 12 assists.

Ryan Anderson scored 15 points for New Orleans, which dropped its second straight. Anthony Davis tied a career high with 11 rebounds to go with eight points, but hit only 4 of 14 shots.

■ Pacers 103, Mavericks 83: David West and George Hill each scored 15 points to help the Indiana Pacers beat the Dallas Mavericks 103-83 on Friday night.

West and Hill, the Pacers' top two scorers, had combined for 5-for-19 shooting and 10 points in Wednesday's loss to Milwaukee.

Roy Hibbert and Sam Young added 14 points apiece for the Pacers, who had lost two straight before beating the Mavericks and their former coach, Rick Carlisle. Indiana (4-6) improved to 3-1 at home.

■ Magic 110, Pistons 106: J.J. Redick scored 23 points, including a go-ahead 3-pointer with 42.8 seconds left, and the Orlando Magic rallied to beat the Detroit Pistons 110-106 on Friday night.

■ 76ers 99, Jazz 93: Jrue Holiday scored 26 points to help the Philadelphia 76ers beat the Utah Jazz 99-93 on Friday night.

Jason Richardson added 20 points for Philadelphia, which snapped a three-game home losing streak.

■ Warriors 106, Wolves 98: David Lee had 18 points and 13 rebounds and the Golden State Warriors dominated inside during a 106-98 victory over the Minnesota Timberwolves on Friday night.

Being an adult means your parents don't have to agree

Dear Amy: My husband and I are in our mid-20s and are very successful professionals. We've enjoyed a happy marriage for the last three years, but we have spent much of that time apart due to my husband's hectic travel with his job.

In addition, at just 25, I am burned out with my own career and desperately want to do something different.

We have saved a large sum of money and want to take a year off to travel together and do some volunteering. We love to travel and would like to spend some uninterrupted time together.

AMY DICKINSON

COLUMNIST

We will announce our plans to our families over the holidays and leave for our trip next summer.

I know my parents are going to hate this idea, and I'm worried they will cut me out of their lives. My parents believe we should continue with our draining (yet well-paying) jobs and have children soon. I desperately want to live my life to the fullest. I feel that I need a break and some perspective before moving forward with the next chapter of my life.

How can I convince my parents to be at peace with our decision?

— Wanderlust

Dear Wanderlust: Adulthood is awesome. You don't have to worry about making your curfew, you can eat s'mores for dinner, and you don't have to convince your mom and dad that you know what you're doing, unless you're asking them for money, which, of course, you are not.

I think your idea sounds great, though I do wonder about your being so burned out at the ripe old age of 25.

However, you don't have to be burned out or fed up to come up with a new plan for the next year or so of your life. All you need is a workable scheme, the funds to pay for it and the enthusiasm and idealism to carry it out.

Enter this conversation realizing that it will be tough for your folks to climb on board the Awesome Express. You can respectfully say to them, "I know you love and care about me, but this feels right. I hope you'll come to respect our choice, even if you don't agree with it."

Dear Amy: This is a tip for "Rachel," who is bothered by a malodorous man at the gym. I, too, have a sensitive nose.

I have found it helpful to put a dab of lavender oil under my nose. What you then smell is the lavender, which masks other smells and is calming too.

— A Sensitive Sniffer

Dear Sensitive: Great suggestion. Thank you.

Horoscope

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY: (Nov. 17). Many will feel intimately connected with you because you make people feel safe enough to open up about their fears and struggles. You'll speak openly and gather followers. A journey starts in December. January brings fresh faces. Support, including financial, comes your way in February. Cancer and Aquarius people adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 40, 28, 14, 39 and 11.

ARIES: (March 21-April 19). The basic grade school sayings ring true. Any five-fingered person pointing the finger of blame has three fingers and a thumb pointing right back at himself.

TAURUS: (April 20-May 20). Go where you're likely to feel insecure. This will grow your world. A bit of nervousness from time to time is a normal function of your humanity. Your mind and nervous system are wired to help you when you need it most.

GEMINI: (May 21-June 21). You are an inconceivably complex mix of talents and limits. Just because you think you should be able to do something doesn't make it so. Accept yourself the way you are, whether or not you feel that you're moving forward.

CANCER: (June 22-July 22). Because of your excellent timing and sincere desire to improve, people open up to you. So ask an expert what you really want to know. You will gain insight into a process, learning not only what to do, but also how to do it.

LEO: (July 23-Aug. 22). Today's work represents only a tiny portion of what you'll eventually put into a job. You are about to get extremely focused. You'll work with such diligence and for so long that you will become wonderful at it.

VIRGO: (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). You'll have the urge to innovate. Whether it's a blessing or a curse is debatable. You won't be able to rest until you know you've done things in a way that only you could.

LIBRA: (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). Ultimately, to achieve your own definition of success, you'll have to narrow your ambition to one goal. New options open up, but be extremely choosy about what you say "yes" to today.

SCORPIO: (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). Your world view will not be turned upside down in one conversation. And though you are open-minded, it's much easier to entertain the ideas of someone who already has many beliefs that are similar to yours.

SAGITTARIUS: (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). The best place to look for inspiration is in the work or life of someone who is like you but a little further along. Those who have reached heights that you cannot relate to at this time can only serve to depress you.

CAPRICORN: (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). You are hyper-focused now, but you also know better than to ignore all whimsy. You must admit that courting serendipity sometimes leads to a breakthrough.

AQUARIUS: (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Ideally, you would tell yourself what to do and then do it without hesitation. But you're not a robot, and that's a good thing. Maybe there's a reason not to move forward. Your resistance may be a kind of intelligence.

PISCES: (Feb. 19-March 20). You'll love the learning process you encounter. You'll have several conversations and pick up many new bits of information. Little by little, you'll assemble a house of knowledge.

Anti-static spray will help with clean up of packing peanuts

Dear Readers: Have you received packages that are filled with those plastic foam peanuts? They usually end up scattered all over the place, and then they end up in the trash. Well, I have some good news: There is an organization that recycles them.

First of all, to easily get the "peanuts" together (since they stick to everything because of static electricity), give them a quick spray or two with anti-static spray.

Now, put them in a container and call 800-828-2214 for a recorded message from The Plastic Loose Fill Council, where it will ask for your ZIP code so it can find a business that will accept the peanuts. Most businesses involve packing and shipping.

Keep this information handy, since the holidays are right around the corner and you may have an abundance of packing peanuts. You also can share the number with friends and family so peanuts don't end up in a landfill.

— Heloise

Dear Heloise: My hint is for budgeting grocery dollars. Every month, I put my grocery dollars on a rechargeable store gift card. Every time I shop, I know exactly how much money I have left for the remainder of the month, which shows on my receipt.

Also, it allows me to zip my card on the machine without having to select "debit" or "credit" and signing, so I typically zip and then assist the clerk by bagging my own groceries in my reusable bags.

I never hold up the line by having credit issues, etc. Also, I can budget for dinner parties or holiday meals by knowing exactly how much money I have to spend.

— Deb in The Villages, Fla.

Dear Heloise: We have had to move many times with our job, and we found a great solution to protecting dishes and other breakables: We wrap them in clean linen, towels, etc. It not only protects the valuables, but also saves much room in packing. We also mark each box for contents and the room they go to.

Thank you for your helpful columns.

Another hint: Someone sent you a question about cat-litter-box dust. We have solved the problem by recycling our newspapers. We tear them into strips, and they work great as litter — no dust, no tracking, no problems with allergies from the dust and less pollution.

It saves us much money and also helps to recycle our newspapers, and there is less stuff to dispose of. Our cats have never had a problem accepting that instead of the dusty litter products.

We believe it is better for their health, as well as for ours.

— I.H. in New Hampshire

Hepatitis A does not have long-term effects like B or C

Dear Drs. Donohue and Roach: I am a female in my 70s. When I was 12 years old, I, along with a younger brother and older sister, all had what our doctor called "yellow jaundice."

We all were very sick for about two weeks. It was very contagious and a good percentage of the schoolchildren had it, although none of my family members at home caught it from us.

I know jaundice in itself is not a disease. Could we have had hepatitis? Are there any long-term effects from it?

— A.P.

Dear A.P.: It does indeed sound like hepatitis.

The most common form of contagious hepatitis is called hepatitis A. It comes from contaminated food or water, but it sounds like your family was very careful if nobody else at home caught it.

DR. DONOHUE

Fortunately, hepatitis A does not have any long-term effects, the way hepatitis B and C do.

Acute mononucleosis sometimes causes hepatitis, but if a lot of kids had it at the same time, I suspect it came from food. There is now a vaccine for hepatitis

A, which is recommended for all travelers.

The booklet on hepatitis explains the three different kinds — A, B and C. Readers can obtain a copy by writing: Dr. Donohue — No. 503, Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475. Enclose a check or money order (no cash) for $4.75 U.S./$6 Can. with the recipient's printed name and address. Please allow four weeks for delivery.

Dear Drs. Donohue and Roach: In 2006, my husband, who was 45, had skin changes on his lower legs and was sent to Rochester University Medical Center, where he was diagnosed with generalized morphea. He was placed on methotrexate; however, the skin changes have spread from just his lower legs to his upper legs and torso.

In the past three years, it has gotten progressively worse. He has ulcers on his lower legs that don't heal. They tell us there is no cure for this disease. Most people, even doctors, have never heard of morphea. It would be nice to see some information. What could it end up doing to his body?

— M.P.

Dear M.P.: Morphea is a rare disease — only about 25 cases are diagnosed per year for every million people in the population. It is related to the autoimmune disease scleroderma, and is sometimes called "limited scleroderma," but does not have the degree of internal organ involvement of systemic scleroderma.

Morphea consists of areas of hardened and thickened skin, affecting women more than men. It can appear at any age.

It is difficult to treat, as it can come and go, leaving after three to six years, or it can develop a chronic course over decades. Morphea can affect small blood vessels, and that — along with the methotrexate, which suppresses the immune system — can make people more susceptible to ulcers and infection. Ultraviolet light has been used successfully in morphea, as have vitamin D derivatives and steroids.

It is worth another trip to the experts at Rochester University.

Mandatory church attendance part of teen's probation in traffic death case

The Associated Press
MUSKOGEE, Okla. — An Oklahoma teenager who pleaded guilty in the traffic death of another teen must attend church for the next 10 years to keep out of prison, an Oklahoma judge said.
The 17-year-old was sentenced this week after pleading guilty as a youthful offender to manslaughter in the death of his passenger, 16-year-old John Luke Dum. Authorities said the teen, who was 16 at the time, had been drinking when he crashed his pickup into a tree, killing Dum last December.
The Tulsa World reported Thursday that Judge Mike Norman handed down a 10-year deferred sentence, meaning the teen can avoid prison if he meets all conditions.
Those conditions include attending church, graduating from high school and welding school, and wearing an ankle bracelet that monitors for alcohol use.
The teen's attorney, Donn Baker, said the church requirement is unusual but that they don't plan to challenge it.
"My client goes to church every Sunday. That isn't going to be a problem for him. We certainly want the probation for him," Baker said.
Assistant District Attorney Jim Carnagey said that the judge has required church attendance with other defendants in the past.
Carnagey said relatives of the victim supported the sentence.
Randall Coyne, professor of law at the University of Oklahoma College of Law, said the church requirement is constitutionally suspect — but that someone would have to challenge it for it to be overturned.

Rev. Tim Hobbs, pastor of Community Baptist Church. Trumpet accompaniment to Thanksgiving hymns will be provided by Dave Jarrett, and Betty Norment will sing. The service will be recorded for WSON. The public is invited.
Trinity Lutheran Church, 501 N. Elm St. will host a Thanksgiving service at 7 p.m. Wednesday. The church also will host Advent worship services at 7 p.m. on Dec. 5, Dec. 12 and Dec. 19; a children's Christmas program at 10 a.m. on Dec. 16; Christmas Eve worship services at 7 p.m. Dec. 24; Christmas Day worship at 10 a.m. Dec. 25; and New Year's Eve worship at 5:30 p.m. Dec. 31. The Rev. Mark Moog invites the public.
Zion United Church of Christ, 437 First St., will host a free Thanksgiving Day dinner for anyone who is alone on the holiday and would like to eat lunch at the church from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. Thursday. The Rev. Deborah McBride, pastor, invites the public. For more information, call 826-0605. The church also will host a Hanging of the Greens ceremony followed by a light meal at noon Nov. 25; an Advent Service of Prayer followed by a light supper at 6 p.m. Dec. 5, Dec. 12 and Dec. 19; and a Christmas Eve Candlelight Service with readings and music at 5:30 p.m. Dec. 24.

Countryview General Baptist Church, 2067 Gregory Drive, will hold a dedication ceremony at 7 p.m. Nov. 25. Everyone is welcome. Bring a poinsettia to remember or honor those you love. Also, the church will host its Annual Haire Family Christmas Toy Benefit Drive at 6 p.m. Dec. 1. Also singing at the event will be

River City Quartet. Bring one unwrapped toy.
Little Canaan Missionary Baptist Church, 400 S. Alvasia St., will host a fall revival at 7 p.m. Nov. 26-30. The Rev. Robert Esters of First Missionary Baptist Church will be the evangelist. The Rev. Willie E. Ellis Sr., pastor, invites the public.
Cairo United Methodist Church, 13510 U.S. 41-Alternate, will present "Journey to Bethlehem" from 7 to 9 p.m. Nov. 29-30 and from 1 to 4 p.m. Dec. 1. Free guided tours will depart approximately every 20 minutes. The public is invited.
First United Methodist Church, 338 Third St., will host its second-annual "Tis The Season" free chili lunch and giveaway of stuffed animals and toiletries immediately following the downtown Christmas parade on Dec. 1. The church also will host a "Cantata Sunday" service at 10 a.m. Dec. 9 that will include several movements of Handel's "Messiah" (including "Hallelujah" Chorus) sung by the choir accompanied by an orchestra and directed by Matthew Vanover. The church will host Christmas Eve Candlelight services on Dec. 24 at 5 p.m. and 11 p.m. with passing of the light and communion. The public is invited to all events.

Henderson General Baptist Church, 2880 Zion Road, will host its annual Drive-Through Living Nativity from 6 to 8 p.m. Dec. 8-9 and a children's Christmas program at 6 p.m. Dec. 16. The public is welcome.
Spottsville Baptist Church, 2130 N. Wood St., will present an original dramatic musical by Stephanie Shouse at 6 p.m. Dec. 16. "What If It Were Today" is a story for all ages about the coming of Jesus told through the viewpoint of the animals. For more information, call 826-9425. Pastor Jeff Shouse invites the public.

RELIGION

Priest good at telling people what they didn't want to hear

By Terry Mattingly
Scripps Howard News Service

Since the goal was to explore the cultural ties that bind, the Rev. John Kavanaugh asked the young Catholics in a St. Louis classroom a basic civics question: How many national and world leaders could they name?

The Jesuit didn't allow the seventh-graders to include celebrities and entertainers, which meant that actor Tom Cruise didn't make the list. In the end, they ended up with 12 names.

"You started off with the pope and the president, of course. Then things got harder after that," said the St. Louis University philosophy professor, describing this scene during a 1990 Denver lecture that I covered for the now-defunct Rocky Mountain News, which was published by The E.W. Scripps Co., the parent company of Scripps Howard News Service.

The questions got easier, for youngsters baptized in untold hours of commercials on cable television.

When asked to name brands of beer, the list on the chalkboard topped 40. How about designer jeans?

The seventh-graders came up with more than 50 brands. They were experts when it came to the shopping-mall facts of life.

The Regis University crowd laughed, but it was nervous laughter, as the author of "Following Christ in a Consumer Society: The Spirituality of Cultural Resistance" walked them through a slideshow demonstrating the power of advertising in shaping the minds of materialistic modern Americans.

Yes, it was funny when the priest offered Freudian interpretations of popular cigarette ads. But no one wanted to laugh at the images demonstrating how professionals were using bleak, depressing, yet erotic images of children in advertising aimed at adults.

Is this, the philosopher asked, what our culture's powers that be think real life is all about? If that is the case, he said, "Then let's be freaks. Let's be tourists. ... We must remember this is not our home."

Kavanaugh died on Nov. 5 at age 71, after a career in service and scholarship that took him from St. Louis to India and then back home again.

His perspectives on suffering and poverty were shaped by his early work with Mother Teresa and the Missionaries of Charity in Calcutta and then with the Jean Vanier communities for those with disabilities in Bangalore.

In addition to his work as a professor and spiritual director for seminarians, Kavanaugh was known for his columns in America magazine, film criticism in The St. Louis Review and numerous books. "Following Christ in a Consumer Society" was reissued twice in new editions, to keep its cultural criticism up to date.

Kavanaugh pleaded guilty to tilting at his share of conservative windmills, but anyone who was paying close attention knew that he was trying to prod the consciences of Catholics on the left as well as the right.

The priest raised eyebrows with a 2002 column titled "Goodbye, Democrats" in which he argued that America's political culture had collapsed to the point that it would be wise for believers to cut their partisan political ties by registering as independent voters.

He stressed that he thought Catholics in the Republican Party needed to bail out, as well.

Writing to his fellow progressives, Kavanaugh proclaimed: "One thing the Democrats really stand for, however, is abortion — abortion on demand, abortion without restraint, abortion paid for by all of us, abortion for the poor of the earth. I am not a one-issue voter, but they have become a one-issue party. ... If traditional Democrats who are disillusioned with the selling out of the working poor and the unborn simply became registered Independent voters, would not more attention be paid?"

The problem, of course, is that it's sinfully easy for ministers — once again, on the left or the right — to keep preaching easy sermons that they know their flocks want to hear, Kavanaugh said when I interviewed him once again in 2008. It's easy to keep lashing away at the same familiar straw men, while avoiding topics that could offend the faithful in the home pews.

The Jesuit summed up his message with a quote that rings as true today as it did the final time that I talked with him.

"Whether you are preaching to liberals or conservatives, it's hard to tell people truths that they don't want to hear," he said in that telephone interview. "It's hard to tell people to love their enemies.

"It's hard to tell people to repent of their sins and to forgive others. ... It's hard, but this is what good preachers have to do."

Reaching out

■ Church offering drive-through prayer ministry

By Cheryl Truman
Lexington Herald-Leader

LEXINGTON — You want that blessing to go?

Not a problem. Centerpointe Christian Church in Lexington has offered drive-through prayers to those who need them since Easter.

Church volunteers offer the prayers tailored to the concerns of each carload that comes through the two-lane prayer carrel at the church located off Leestown Road. Drive-through prayers are offered on the third Wednesday of each month.

If the drive-through prayer ministry becomes really successful — and so far, church members say it has drawn a good response — the service might be offered on a weekly basis.

"We drive by unaware of what people carry daily," said Rex Hughes, who is in charge of the church's prayer ministry. "It's eye-opening. It's touching. It's a simple way to reach out to our community and say, 'We're going to love you.'"

Volunteers stand by as drivers stop. Driver and passengers are asked to relay concerns for which prayers are said. The information is written on a card, which is used for additional prayer later, organizers said.

If participants are willing to offer an email address, they will receive additional information from the church. Hughes said the church is gaining some members from the ministry.

The idea for the drive-through prayer ministry came from a church member who had heard of its operation at another church, he said.

"It's really taken off," Hughes said. During the two-hour sessions, the church has had 15 to 26 people drive through seeking prayer.

Brian Bolton, pastor of the independent Christian church, which was founded in November 2004 and draws 230 to 250 worshippers each week, said the drive-through prayer ministry, along with such events as the church's "Trunk or Treat" outdoor Halloween celebration, are part of its "vision and passion to connect with those who are disconnected."

"Our mission is to connect with our community," Bolton said. "We have a huge heart to love our community."

The drive-through prayer ministry is gaining traction around the country, according to church Web sites from Florida to California to Illinois.

Also gaining popularity nationally is another method to energize prayer ministries a step beyond telephone prayer chains and email: prayer paging, in which your cellphone alerts you each time a prayer is said on your behalf.

The Centerpointe church hopes to see congregational growth from its drive-through ministry, which introduces potential members to the church quickly, Hughes said.

"You're one foot in the door almost," Hughes said.

"GIVE THANKS"

In the Gospel of Luke we have the account of Jesus healing ten lepers. "They stood at a distance from him and raised their voices, saying, 'Jesus, Master! Have pity on us!' and when he saw them, he said, 'Go show yourselves to the priests.' As they were going they were cleansed." (Luke 17:12-15) Jesus responds to their act of faith by sending them to the priests the only ones in the community who could pronounce that they were clean of the dreaded disease of leprosy.

The story is like many of the other healing accounts in scripture except this one raises the issue of giving thanks. Only one of the ten returned to Jesus to give thanks and by doing so he not only is healed but he also receives the gift of salvation. I was talking with the sixth through eighth graders at Holy Name School recently about this passage and I asked them, Why did the other nine not come back to give thanks to Jesus? They came up with many reasonable answers, they went on to the priests to be declared clean, they did not realize that they had been healed; they were so happy that they went home instead, etc. I then asked them if they ever forgot to say thank you and if so, Why? Of course many hands were raised and the reasons were essentially the same.

With great wisdom our country pauses this weekend to give THANKS. It is so easy to miss the opportunity or to be distracted or to not even notice the gifts we have received. Please take this opportunity to give thanks, thanks to our God, thanks to our family and friends, thanks to our military, police and fire departments. Thanks to all those who have served us in one way or another over this past year. Let this Thanksgiving be more than just a big meal or the start of Christmas shopping, let it be a true day of giving thanks and celebrating the great love of our God.

Seek God's guidance as you give to charities

Dear Dr. Graham: Toward the end of the year we get dozens of letters from various ministries and charities asking for money. I'm sure they're all worthy, and we'd like to help them, but we can't support everything.

How should we decide which ones to support?

— Mrs. A.K.

Dear Mrs. A.K.: I'm thankful you don't simply toss these letters in the wastebasket; many organizations (including our own) simply wouldn't exist if people didn't support them with their financial gifts. And many of them especially depend on year-end giving to continue their work.

No, you can't support every worthy cause — nor does God expect you to. If they are doing God's work, you can safely assume that He will raise up others to support the organizations you can't support (although you can still support them with your prayers).

I always encourage people to give first of all to their local church, and only then consider other ministries and charities.

Begin by asking God to guide you as you give. He knows which organizations need your support; ask Him to help you find them. Study them to know what they are doing; check if they are known for having high ethical and financial standards; seek advice from your pastor or other knowledgeable person.

BILLY GRAHAM
COLUMNIST

Most of all, remember that everything you have comes from God, and He wants you to use it all for His glory.

We live in the richest nation the world has ever known, and most of us could give far more than we actually do.

Don't see your giving only as a responsibility, therefore, but as an opportunity to have an impact on the lives of others.

Remember the example of the Macedonians, who "Out of the most severe trial, their overflowing joy and their extreme poverty welled up in rich generosity.... even beyond their ability" (2 Corinthians 8:2-3).

'Star Wars' figures, dominoes in Toy Hall of Fame

By Carolyn Thompson
Associated Press

ROCHESTER, N.Y. — Luke Skywalker and Princess Leia outmuscled little green army men for a spot in the National Toy Hall of Fame. “Star Wars” action figures join centuries-old dominoes in the class of 2012, which was announced by the Rochester hall Thursday.

A national selection committee chose them from among 12 finalists, plucking the most ancient and most modern toys from the list.

“Star Wars” action figures went on the market in 1978, following the 1977 release of the 20th Century Fox movie.

The 3 ¾-inch figures of Han Solo, Chewbacca, R2-D2 and company were sold until 1985 and again from the mid-1990s to today.

Museum officials say their phenomenal popularity inspired other toy makers to tie their products to movies and television series and they note the toys’ appeal extends to adults who continue to collect them.

“They are a force to be reckoned with,” said Patricia Hogan, curator at The Strong museum, which houses the Toy Hall of Fame.

More than 20 lines of “Star Wars” figures have launched, propelling the film series’ merchandise sales to $20 billion over the past 35 years. The action figures were first made by Kenner, which was bought by Tonka and later Hasbro.

Dominoes originated in China in the 1300s and appeared later in Europe in a slightly different form. A standard set of 28 tiles represents all possible results when rolling a pair of six-sided dice, with the addition of two blank sides. Although there’s a variety of ways to play with them, the cascading toppling of lined-up tiles put the “domino effect” into the American lexicon.

The toys beat out plastic green army men, the board game Clue, the Fisher-Price Corn Popper, Lite-Brite, the Magic 8 Ball, the pogo stick, sidewalk chalk, the electronic game Simon, the tea set and Twister.

Officials at the Toy

Hall of Fame say anyone can nominate a toy and thousands of suggestions come in every year.

An internal committee of curators, educators and historians chooses the finalists and then a national selection committee votes for the winners.

To date, 49 toys have made the cut. They range from classics, like Play-Doh and Slinky, to the less obvious, like the stick and cardboard box.

Longevity is a key criterion for getting into the 14-year-old hall. Each toy must be widely recognized, foster learning, creativity or discovery through play, and endure in popularity over generations.

“Play is an essential activity, critical to learning and to human development,” said Christopher Bensch, The Strong’s vice president of collections. “Play is also a window into understanding American culture.”

Drought forces Midwest agribusiness firm to ponder drier future

By David Mercer
Associated Press

DECATUR, Ill. — At the height of this year’s drought, decision-makers at the agribusiness giant Archers Daniels Midland kept an uneasy eye on the reservoir down the hill from their headquarters.

At one point, the water level fell to within 2 inches of the point where the company was in danger of being told for the first time ever that it couldn’t draw as much as it wanted. The company uses millions of gallons of water a day to turn corn and soybeans into everything from ethanol and cattle feed to cocoa and a sweetener used in soft drinks and many other foods.

Rain eventually lifted Lake Decatur’s level again. But the close call left ADM convinced that, like many Midwestern companies and the towns where they operate, it could no longer take an unrestricted water supply for granted, especially if drought becomes a more regular occurrence due to climate change or competition ramps up among water users.

While companies in the Great Lakes region and other parts of Middle America long counted on water being cheap and plentiful, they now realize they must conserve because finding new water sources is difficult and expensive — if it can be done at all.

“You’ve got to plan for the worst, and be prepared for that,” said Brad Crookshank, the wastewater superintendent for ADM’s corn processing plant in Decatur. “There’s not a lot of low-hanging fruit for additional water supplies.”

ADM, which pumps more water out of Lake Decatur than any other consumer, wasn’t the only big water-user affected by the drought. Two Midwestern power plants shut down for periods this summer because they lacked water to operate, according to Midwest ISO, the electrical-grid operator for the region. MISO spokesman Brandon Wright declined to identify the plants because they’re owned by grid clients.

With half of Minnesota, the “Land of 10,000 Lakes,” still in deep drought, the Department of Natural Resources told 50 water users, including several major ones, to stop drawing from rivers and streams in October.

They included a paper plant owned by Sappi North America and a ceiling panel factory owned by USG Corp. The companies declined to comment, but DNR officials said they expressed concern about the future of their businesses.

“We have discussions like, ‘Are you going to shut us down or put people out of work?’ And we say ‘You need to identify (alternative) sources of water so we’re not put in this position,’” said Dave Leuthe, deputy director of the Minnesota DNR Ecological and Water Resources Division.

Homeowners and small businesses are used to being asked to conserve water during drought. But big companies are often the last to face restrictions. Factories provide jobs, and utilities generate the power that keeps the lights and machinery on. Limiting their access to water could mean cutting production and employment.

“If you’re going to start playing hardball with those businesses, they might decide this is too much trouble, we’re going to move to another location,” said Michael Doran, a professor of water and wastewater engineering at the University of Wisconsin.

In Decatur, ADM is king. The company employs 4,000 people in the town of 76,000. And it’s influential far beyond the city’s borders. ADM has 265 processing plants in 75 countries, is ranked 28th in this year’s Fortune 500 and is legendary for political influence.

Twenty-five years ago, no one at the company was very concerned about water.

But the Midwest drought of 1988 scared ADM into finding ways to reuse it. The result, in part, is a 25-acre pond full of waste water, which will be cleaned by bacteria in frothy, churning brown lagoons that sit nearby. Eventually, the water will be used again, mainly for cooling.

“It sounds real noble to say we want to conserve water,” Crookshank said. “In reality it was, ‘Don’t shut the plant down.’”

Water is now an ongoing concern. When Decatur officials started warning residents this summer that restrictions were coming, they also initiated weekly talks with ADM and another local agribusiness firm, Tate & Lyle, about the receding lake. The discussions, however, had a different tone than orders given to other businesses, such as carwashes, to stop using city water.

“The discussions that we’ve had with ADM and Tate & Lyle involve, what kind of restrictions can they live with?” said Keith Alexander, the city’s director of water management. Aside from hospitals and the fire department, the companies are the most critical water users in town, he added.

Other companies started hauling water. Some shut down. None were happy.

mammoth water tank at its carwash and hauled in $2,000 worth of water a week to stay open, co-owner Jay Billingsley said. But efforts to talk to the city about easing its restrictions were fruitless, he said, even though the carwash consumes a fraction of what the big companies drink.

“I understand (carwashes are) not a necessity to live,” Billingsley said, “but at the same point, the same time, there are people that depend on this industry.”

The city finally eased restrictions on carwashes in late October after it rained. By then, officials were uncomfortably close to telling ADM that it, too, would have to cut back — by 15 percent.

Today in history

Associated Press

Today is Saturday, Nov. 17, the 322nd day of 2012. There are 44 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Nov. 17, 1962, Washington Dulles International Airport was dedicated by President John F. Kennedy.

On this date:

In 1934, Lyndon Baines Johnson married Claudia Alta Taylor, better known as Lady Bird, in San Antonio, Texas.

In 1973, President Richard Nixon told Associated Press managing editors in Orlando, Fla.: "People have got to know whether or not their president is a crook. Well, I'm not a crook."

In 1987, a federal jury in Denver convicted two white supremacists of civil rights violations in the 1984 slaying of radio talk show host Alan Berg. (Both men later died in prison.)

Five years ago: A Nobel-winning U.N. scientific panel said in a landmark report released in Valencia, Spain, that the Earth was hurtling toward a warmer climate at a quickening pace.

One year ago: Occupy Wall Street protesters clogged streets and tied up traffic around the U.S. to mark two months since the movement's birth and signal they weren't ready to quit, despite the breakup of many of their encampments by police. Baseball owners unanimously approved the sale of the Houston Astros from Drayton McLane to Jim Crane, which will lead to the team moving from the NL Central to the AL West for the 2013 season. Demi Moore said she was ending her marriage to fellow actor Ashton Kutcher.

BEST BETS

2:30 p.m. on 14 College Football

A clash of Division I rivals is on tap today in South Bend, Ind., where Everett Golson and the Fighting Irish of Notre Dame welcome Tanner Price and the Demon Deacons of Wake Forest. At these teams' last meeting a year ago on Wake Forest's home turf, Tommy Rees threw two touchdown passes for a 24-17 Irish victory.

3:30 p.m. on E2 NASCAR Racing

A day before the big event in Sprint Cup, the finale of the Nationwide Series season comes today at South Florida's Homestead-Miami Speedway when its top drivers rev things up in the Ford EcoBoost 300. A field including Elliott Sadler, Ricky Stenhouse Jr., Sam Hornish Jr. and Danica Patrick will go at it on the 1.5-mile oval in pursuit of the race and series championship.

7 p.m. on 11 Movie: Holiday High School Reunion

Rachel Boston stars in this new romantic comedy as a young woman who returns to her hometown at Christmastime and hopes to reconnect with "the one who got away" from her high-school years. As she revisits those years — taking us along via flashbacks — she discovers that maybe he didn't get away after all. Marilu Henner and Harry Hamlin also star.

7 p.m. on 10 Movie: The Color Purple

Steven Spielberg directed this adaptation of Alice Walker's Pulitzer Prize-winning novel about an abused, black Southern wife (Whoopi Goldberg) who finds love from an unlikely source — her husband's mistress — and hope from her sister's incredible journey. Oprah Winfrey made her film debut in this 1985 drama, which surprisingly failed to impress the Academy as much as the book did the Pulitzer board. Quincy Jones, a co-producer, wrote the score.

7 p.m. on 18K Movie: Matchmaker Santa

Melanie (Lacey Chabert) is engaged to Justin (Thad Luckinbill), a workaholic, but her best friend thinks that she would be better off with Justin's assistant, Dean (Adam Mayfield). With the help of a man named Chris, can Melanie's affections be redirected? Florence Henderson and John Ratzenberger also star in this new holiday romance.

7 p.m. on 10 Movie: Safe House

Denzel Washington excels at playing characters who don't wear everything on their sleeves, and he has another in this well-paced 2012 melodrama about a rogue CIA man forced into hiding by his shady connections. The fellow agent (Ryan Reynolds) assigned to guard him thinks the mission will be by the book ... but that quickly proves inaccurate, sending both men on the run for their lives in an uneasy alliance. Vera Farmiga, Sam Shepard and Brendan Gleeson co-star.

8 p.m. on A Parking Wars

In Detroit, while Eric brings a machinelike approach to ticketing illegally parked vehicles, fellow agent Sonja deals with an angry driver who says he was misled. Towing company owner Hawk has a whole lot — pun intended — of enraged vehicle owners trying to get their wheels back from his Trenton, N.J., base in this new episode.

8 p.m. on 2 Movie: John Carter

Disney hoped this 2012 adventure would launch a movie series based on Edgar Rice Burroughs' "John Carter of Mars" novels. Taylor Kitsch ("Friday Night Lights") shows off his physical trainer's work as the title hero, a Civil War veteran spirited to the red planet to help the native inhabitants win a war. Lynn Collins plays the princess who entices him; Willem Dafoe gives a motion-capture performance in a cast that also includes Samantha Morton.

8:50 p.m. on 8 Movie: Men in Black

If aliens are frightened by dark sunglasses, the planet is definitely safe. Marvel Comics characters Agent J and Agent K (Will Smith, Tommy Lee Jones) are ebony-clad government operatives fighting insectlike extraterrestrial terrorists. This 1997 adventure-comedy also stars Rip Torn and Linda Fiorentino.

9 p.m. on 14 Law & Order: Special Victims Unit

Detectives Stabler and Benson (Christopher Meloni, Mariska Hargitay) are confronted by the baffling case of Heather (guest star Ellen Woglom), a girl who returns home after being missing for four years, telling a story about being kidnapped into sex slavery. Why, then, is she virtually unrecognizable to her family? And why do her answers not seem to add up? Dann Florek, Ice-T and Richard Belzer co-star in "Stranger."

9 p.m. on 10 Movie: Mission: Impossible III

The assignment turns intensely personal for Impossible Missions Force agent Ethan Hunt (Tom Cruise) in the classic television series' 2006 big-screen spinoff, directed with rapid pace and maximum action by home-screen veteran J.J. Abrams ("Lost"). Hunt pursues the villain (Philip Seymour Hoffman) who killed a novice IMF operative (Keri Russell) and now threatens Hunt's fiancée (Michelle Monaghan).
